New plan for Beirut unveiled

BEIRUT, Oct. 9 (AFP) - A two-stage plan to expand the multinational buffer force in Beirut to 15,000 men was reported here

The force would be given the task of maintaining security in Beirut and its suburbs and inside a 20 kilometer belt around the capital, the Lebanese press said.

The existence of such a plan was categorically denied by a diplomatic source in Beirut but Lebanese military sources said the plan would be in two phases. In phase one, the force, now 3,900-strong, would be increased to 5,000 with troops detached from the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) and contingents from other European conntries.

Io phase two, its strength would go up to 15,000, the troops being deployed in a perimeter bounded to the north by the River Nahr El Kelb, to the east by Mount Meten and Bhamdoun and to the south by Damonr.

The plan had not yet been submitted to President Amin Gemayel or to the ambassadors of the three countries making up the present buffer force, France, the United States and Italy, the sources said. Diplomatic sources admitted that possible enlarging of the buffer force had been considered by the permanent committee. This includes the Lebanese president, plus the French, U.S. and Italian ambassadors.

Sun lauds ties with Kingdom

By Hussein Dakroub Arab News Staff

TAIPEL Oct. 9 - "The economic and political relations between the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia and the Republic of China have been strengthened considerably and we are very bappy to play a small role in Saudi Arabia's development plans." Sun Yun-suan, the prime minister of the Republic of China, told Arab News Saturday.

Premier Sun made the remarks at a press briefing in the government building here, one day before the double tenth celebrations marking the National Day of the Republic of China. Praising the Saudi Arabian-Nationalist Chinese relationship. Premier Sun said, "The two countries maintain close cooperation and the Republic of China is keen not only on keeping the friendship, but also on further strengthening bilateral rela-

Discussing internal economic and political conditions in the Republic of China, Premier Sun said the government in Taipei is trying its best to make "our people work hard in order to upgrade the country's development." "With two thirds of Taiwan being mountains, we are not producing enough food at the present time. However, our government, while stressing the importance of the agricultural sector, aims to expand farming because we depend on agricultural products," he explained.

The Chinese premier revealed that the government is trying to increase employment by building new factories.

On Taiwan's future development plans, Premier Sun said, "We must step up our development program. We are currently seeking to improve the economic and development sectors. We hope to implement our development plan by the end of the decade." He emphasized that, in spite of the difficulties facing the Republic of China, "we are determined to continue our growth and

"We will not negotiate with the government of Communist China as long as it upholds communism. We believe in democracy and the free enterprise system. Communism has proved its failure and it cannot solve the problems of China or improve the lot of Chinese,"

To emphasize his point, Premier Sun said "if you ask any peasant or farmer, 'do you want communism,' he will immediately say 'no'. The question then is to convince the majority of the people in Communist China that we have a better system. Taiwan has freedom in all its aspects, unlike Communist China where one has no choice about his job. place of living or other essential matters," be

Poland dissolves free trade union

WARSAW, Oct. 9 (Agencies) - Poland's Solidarity trade union was dissolved by parliament Friday night, formally closing a chapter in the nation's history which deeply alarmed Communist allies but inspired hope for better times in millions of Poles.

The Solidarity period, lasting 16 months from August 1980 to the declaration of martial law last December, brought an unprecedented spirit of openness to Poland but also a political revolt against the results of 35 years of Communist rule. The government here argues that a genuine and justified workers' movement was hijacked by political extremists at home and exploited by the West to turn it into a weapon to hring down social-

Swedes continue search for sub

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 9 (R) - The Swedish Navy's nine-day-old submarine hunt continued Saturday amid speculation that the suspected fireign intruder near Muskoe Naval Base may be a mini spy vessel launched from a mother submarine nearby.

A Norwegian newspaper Bergens Tidende quoted Norwegian government sources Saturday as saying the Swedish Navy had identified the intruder as a mini submarine with a two or three-man crew. It quoted Norwegian Naval sources as saying the Soviet Union had seven or eight small craft which could be carried inside larger submarines and launched from the "mother" for delicate spy-

Swedish Naval press spokesmen said they had not heard about the report and Norwegian officials had no immediate comment. But official Swedish Navy spokesman Sven Carlsson said Friday that officers believed they were dealing with two submarines working as a pair. The bunt by patrol boats and helicopters is in the Haarsfiaero south of Stockholm.

One submarine was believed to be trapped by anti-submarine nets inside the area close to Muskoe, the nerve center of the Swedish Navy, while the other was thought to be lurking in Swedish territorial waters outside. Former destroyer Capt. Hans Von Hofsten has given his private opinion that the Swedes may be facing a new type of small, streogthened submarine, either manned or unman-

Thatcher rules out policy change

LONDON, Oct. 9 (R) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's signal to her opponents could oot be clearer. She intends to seek a secood term sticking to her rigorous economic policies.

Any change of course in her three-year-old battle against inflation before the next general election would be a betrayal of the government's principles, she believes. The prime minister's Conservative Party conference's re-affirmation of what her adversaries call Thatcherism sets the battle scene for the campaign, with inflation sharply lower and interest rates down, but with unemployment at a record high which could persist for a long

The election could occur at any time before May 1984, when the five-year term of Mrs. Thatcher's rightwing government ends. Temperamentally, the small-town grocer's daughter who became Britain's first woman prime minister in 1979 would prefer to see out the full five years, her aides say. But many in British politics are convinced that Mrs. Thatcher, 57 next Wednesday, will be persuaded to call the election sooner.

Dissolution of the union, of which one in every four Poles was a member, was sure to create deep resentment among a large section of the peuple, many of whom found it hard to believe that Solidarity would actually disappear. There was no immediate reaction. The streets were quiet Friday night and there were no calls for the demonstratiuns like those staged earlier this year to show support for Solidarity and opposition to martial law. Government officials have said the passing uf the Trade Union Bill was a necessary step toward suspending martial law which military ruler Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski said he would like to do befure the end of this year. The officials have stressed, however, that this would only be possible if there was calm - that is, no demonstrations. The scrapping of Solidarity is expected to force Western states to rethink their approach to the Polish

Mitterrand meets African leaders

KINSHASA, Oct. 9 (AP) - Saturday's formal session of the ninth annual Franco-African summit was canceled to allow some of the 39 African heads of state to meet 'informally" with French President Francois Mitterrand.

Summit officials said Mitterrand met separately with the leaders of Zaire, Ivoy Coast, Benin, Mozambique, Mauritania, Upper Volta, Gabon, Central African Republic and Senegal to "discuss bilateral issues". Details of the discussions were not revealed, but it was assumed that French aid to Africa was among the topics. Mitterrand and his Socialist government are among the strongest Western advocates of increased aid from developed countries to developing countries.

But the French economy has been among the hardest hit by the Western econumic recession, and Mitterrand said Saturday the crisis posed problems for industrialized countries "worried about maintaining their level of cooperation" with the Third World.

On Friday, Mitterrand lashed out at the U.S. monetary policy, saying the "erratic movement" of the dollar had put "most nations of the world, particularly the poorest, in an intolerable position." During the summit, which ends Sunday, Mitterrand is also expected to use his influence to try to heal the deep split within the Organization of African Unity over the protracted war between Morocco and the Polisario Front for control of the Western Sahara.

The OAU summit in Libya last August fell apart for lack of a quorum when Morocco and other moderate Arab states boycutted the meeting to protest OAU membership for the Polisario and the possible scating of a Polisario delegation.

Washington meetings concluded

Kingdom, U.S. establish joint business committee

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9 (Agencies) -Saudi Arabia and the United States will establish a committee to promote joint business ventures, officials of the two countries announced Saturday. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and Finance Minister Muhammad Ali Aba Al-Khail said the new committee was one of several mitiatives agreed by the U.S.-Saudi Joint Commission on Economic Cooperation.

A new technical pact on cooperation with the King Saud University Administrative Department was signed after the two-day meeting of the seventh joint commission, Regan and Aba Al-Khail said at a news con-

Aha Al-Khail said the meeting had been "snccessful". However, the Kingdom received no definite commitments from the Americans on actions they had sought on tariffs, tax treatment of Saudi Arabian investment in the United States, and anti-boycott rules. Regan said the U.S. welcomed a suggestion from the business members of the joint commission to give preferential tariff treatment for Saudi Arabian exports to the United States - "hut we are not committed on that."

Saudi Arabian husinessmen said at an ear-lier news briefing that U.S. withholding of taxes and taxes on interest impeded Saudi Arabian investments, but again Regan said any change hy the United States would require further study.

He told reporters that since Americans and all other foreigners investing in the U.S. pay these taxes, it would be difficult to justify different treatment for Saudi Arabians.

Telephone department to go public

JEDDAH, Oct. 9 - Saudi Telephone, the government telephone department is targeted for conversion into a public corporation by 1985, according to Posts, Telegraph and Telephones Minister Dr.

Alawi Darwish Kayyal. In an interview with Al -Bilad Saturday. the minister said that studies to convert the department are underway and almost 60 percent of them have been completed. The corporation, in addition to the telephone service, would be responsible for telegrap and telex services, Kayyal said. A statute has been drawn up and the corporation will be given the flexibility with financial and administrative matters, including an independent hudget. However, the postal service will remain in government control.

Telephone lines in the Kingdom are expected to reach 1.5 million by the end of the Third Five-Year Development Plan (1985), the minister said. However, 300,000 Additional lines are being discussed now, he added. The service then will have reached to 350 towns and villages across the Kingdom.

He stressed that the electronic telephone equipment in the Kingdom are among the most advanced in the world. Subscribers have direct dial access to 110 countries. Kayyal also pointed out the importance of cooperation and coordination among members of the Gulf Cooperation Council in regulating frequencies. Things are getting complicated and if frequencies are not regulated we may disrupt each other," he was quoted as say-

Civil servant job changes are proposed

RIYADH, Oct. 9 - Working hours of government workers could increase, along with salaries, if fundamental changes proposed here during a seminar are approved according to Muhammad Abdullah Al-Sharif, assistant secretary general of the Control Board. He told Al-Madinah Saturday that a comber of factors must be taken into consideration including winter time and summer time.

Sharif said that working bours will be increased and timing changed to avoid civil servants engaging in secondly job activities. The proposed system provides for a five-day working week. Civil servants will work for eight hours as of 8 a.m., with a rest from noon to 1 p.m. for prayers and a light meal. How-ever, a different schedule will be observed during Ramadan (the month of fasting) and the three months that represent the peak summer period. At that period, officials will work uninterrupted for six hours, from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. If Ramadan falls in winter, then office work would start at 9 a.m. instead of 7

The official said that the new time schedule will make it very difficult for certain civil servants who were in the habit of engaging in commercial activities that have nothing to do with their functions to pursue such activities. If they did so in the past, it is because they had a lot of free time after 2.30 p.m., besides the time from regular working hours. Those who will decide to quit their function in favor of their private business are not worth keeping in the civil service anyway, he pointed out.

· Moreover, overtime will be considerably curtailed, as it was found harmful than anything else. It will be replaced by a proper shift system, which will also make it possible to rely more and more on national manpower rather than alien contractees. Some of the disadvantage of overtime are that the official delays some work on purpose to give a justification for coming back in the afternoon or at night and earn extra money, which can only reduce production levels.

Persons working on overtime usually do not strictly observe the overtime working bours. Some even don't show up at all. Overtime also created friction and bitterness in some cases, as some persons consider it an advantage to work in a particular division or another one because their colleagues there are given a chance to work overtime. Selection is always cootested by other officials who immediately think in terms of favors. It was also found that if a person managed to be summoned for overtime work on Thursday and Friday for an average ten bours, for instance, such a person would earn an extra money equivalent to half the monthly salary.

TAIF, Oct. 9 - Prince Sultan, the second deputy premier and defense and aviation minister, has ordered a little boy treated at his expense at the Armed Forces Hospital, after the boy slid his left hand into a meat mincer his mother was operating at home in her kitchen, Al-Madinak, reported Satur-

Saudi Arabian Pavilion educates American public

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. Oct. 9 - The Saudi Arabian Pavilion at the 1982 World's Fair here was designed to make people feel comfortable and welcome and by the end of September more than three million visitors came to the pavilion and over six million pieces of information had been distributed.

The pavilion of Saudi Arabia is the first participation by the Kingdom in an exposition held in the United States. The invitation to participate was accepted because the government felt that the themes of international understanding and energy development are important topics for all nations.

This year marks fifty years of Saudi-U.S friendship and the opportunity to participate in the fair made it possible to reach thousands of people who might otherwise oot have the chance to learn about the Kingdom.

Being at the fair is not only a gesture of goodwill in celebration of this friendship, but a commitment toward increased understanding and cooperation for the future.

The pavilion, which has over 16,000 square feet of interior space, was designed with three points in mind: visitors would have little or no information about Saudi Arabia; images of Saudi Arabia tend to be negative or misinformed at best; in order to change these images, it would be necessary to present Saudi Arabian society as a whole, not just the elements devoted to energy development.

The pavilion exhibits cover five general areas: Saudi-U.S. relations, culture and history, religion, energy and infrastructure develoment, and human resources develop-ment. The theme of the exhibit, "Eternal Values in a Dynamic Nation," was chosen to highlight the importance of religion and tradition in guiding the growth and development of Saudi Arabian society.

The design of the pavilioo was aimed at making people feel comfortable and welcome. Its openness and use of colors create an "oasis" feeling. The design uses Islamic arches in the interior and exterior displays. A major asset to the pavilion is the presence of Saudi Arabian hosts and hostesses dressed in the Saudi Arabian oational clothing. They represent the human side of the tremendous development that has occurred in the last

The percentage of overall attendance increased from 20-22 percent during May to over 30 perceot in September and October. Some days over 40 percent of the total vis-itors at the fair came to the Saudi Arabian

This remarkable turnout, much beyond projections, resulted from a number of factors. First of all, there is a great deal of curiously about Saudi Arabia and Islam. The pavilion enjoyed consistently good reviews in the media and with the public-at-large. The design of the pavilion was successful in attracting people's atteotion and keeping them interested. As lines to other pavilions decreased, it became clear that Saudi Arabia became a favorite oo the visitor's list. Finally, the program of personal attention and information distributioo made visitors feel welcome and contributed to a return visit rate of about 15 percent.

Visitors are particularly impressed with the sections on culture, history and Islam. It was necessary to expand the Grand Mosque Show, a sound and light presentation on Islam, since people often had to wait over an hour to see it. Over 5000 visitors a day see this display. The Saudi Arabian Pavilion has become one of the top three exhibits at the

The Saudi Arabian staff have given 18 seminars on topics such as Saudi history and religion, family life, the educational system. and energy-related issues. Going into the community has had another effect of encouraging people to visit the pavilion. Saudi Arabia is proud of its participation at the 1982 World's Fair.

E. Beirut searches postponed

BEIRUT. Oct. 9 (AP) — A demilitariza-tion plan for Christian East Beirut has been postponed pending completion of the Lebanese Army's massive sweep of West Beirut. Lehanese newspapers and government sources reported Saturday.

The plan to collect weapons and disarm rightwing Christian militiamen who control East Beirut was postponed after the Lebanese Army requested an extension of its schedule for completing the search and arrest campaign in Muslim neighborhoods, the government sources said.

The French-language L'Orient-Le Jour newspaper quoted well-informed sources as saying that the army had failed to unearth massive amounts of weapons and ammuni-tion still believed hidden in West Beirut. It quoted the sources as saying the army had discovered only five percent of the weapons thought to be in West Beirut, former stronghold of the Palestine Liberation Organization whose commandos were evacuated from the capital six weeks ago.

Lehanese newspapers said Friday the army had collected 100 tons of ammunition and weapons Thursday, the third day of the operation. More than 1,000 illegal aliens, suspected criminals, escaped convicts and people with false papers or expired visas have

On procedure to eject Israel

Arabs plan consultations at U.N.

UNITED NATIONS. Oct. 9 (R) - Arab. members decided Friday to consult representatives from other regional groups on a procedure to eject Israel's delegation from the United Nations General Assembly, diplomats said after an Arab group caucus.

They said this was a follow-up to a decision taken by the Arab League foreign ministers at their meeting recently in Tunis, and the successful ouster of the Israelis from the International Atomic Energy Agency con-ference in Vienna. The United States has threatened reprisals against the U.N., including the possible withholding of financial contributions, if Israel's representation is tam-

First reports from the Arab group meeting Friday were that a decision was taken to press for the rejection of the Israeli delegation's credentials and that this would be done in the coming week. But several Arab delegates later indicated that the group stopped short of deciding to press for an immediate ouster.

Instead, the delegates said. Arab diplomats would contact representatives from other regions to try to determine bow much support they might count on. The sources said it was proposed to put back consideration to Oct. 28. A two-thirds majority is necessary to set aside the committee's recommendations.

Elsewhere in Nairohi, the United States staged a hrief walkout Friday from a world conference of the International Telecommunications Union (ITU) in protest at a Libyan attack on U.S. support for Israel.

On the ninth day of the six-week plenipotentiary conference, the United States also restated its resolve to lesve the conference altogether and reappraise its involvement in the ITU if Israel is excluded from functions of the 157-member hody.

A draft resolution sponsored by Algeris and seven other countries has called for Israel's exclusion from the ITU. The ITU is a specialized agency of the United Nations governing international cooperation in communications. The plenipotentiary conference is its supreme authority. It last met nine years ago in Spain.

The Libyan minister of communications and marine transport. Bucari Salim Hoda. attacked Israel for its invasion of Lebanon and for its involvement in the Beirut massacre. The American delegation walked out after the Libyan minister said Israel had used equipment in Lebanon supplied by the U.S. which was "a mockery of international organizations and regulations."

Soviet, Afghan troops retreat from Panjshir

ISLAMABAD. Oct. 9 (AFP) - Soviet and Afghan troops withdrew a week ago after a powerful offensive in the strategic Panjshir Valley north of Afghanistan's capital Kabul. it was learned here Saturday from several well-informed sources.

They said the offensive thoroughly disorganized that district, which is essential for the Islamic resistance forces. Some 11,000 sol-diers (including 6,000 Russians) attacked starting Aug. 27 with 700 tanks and armored vehicles, said several Westerners who were there. The attackers lost about 400 men. while about 200 Mujaheddin (Islamic fighters) and civilians were killed, according to the most conservative estimates.

The fighting was the toughest in three years, the valley's rebel commander stated in a message received in Peshawar, over the border in Pakistan. Soviet and Afghan forces had already occupied the valley five times previously without taking control.

At the start of the Afghan crisis, that long. narrow valley has been the rebels' bestorganized bastion. The valley gives access to the Kabul plain, and its tributary valleys constitute passages to the provinces.

Soviet and Afghan forces advanced for three weeks to the valley's north end, said a Frenchman who was with the Mujaheddin shortly after the drive's onset. They also occupied gorges leading into the valley. The attackers encountered no frontal resistance. The Mujaheddin apparently only harassed with raids, especially during the withdrawal of the columns toward Kabul.

Advances by the armored columns always followed heavy air attacks on villages and isolated farms, judging by accounts of witnesses and reports from Western diplomatic sources here.

Only one house in ten is still intact. Threefourths of the crops were devasted and herds were decimated, say Mujaheddin based in

A French physician of the International Medical Aid Association saw several villages bombarded. Early in the afternoon of Sept. 24, he related, helicopters fired rockets at the village of Borak in the valley bottom. Five minutes later, six successive pairs of MiG planes bombed the village, killing 10 of the 300 inhabitants.

from pro-regime Iranians residing in this country. A spokesman said they were prepared to fast until death.

Four persons, including two females, had been treated briefly in hospitals during the previous 24 hours, the spokesman said Saturday. They subsequently returned and resumed their fast on the lawn of the residence of opposition parliamentarian George Fernandes, he said. The spokesman asked not to be identified for reasons of safety.

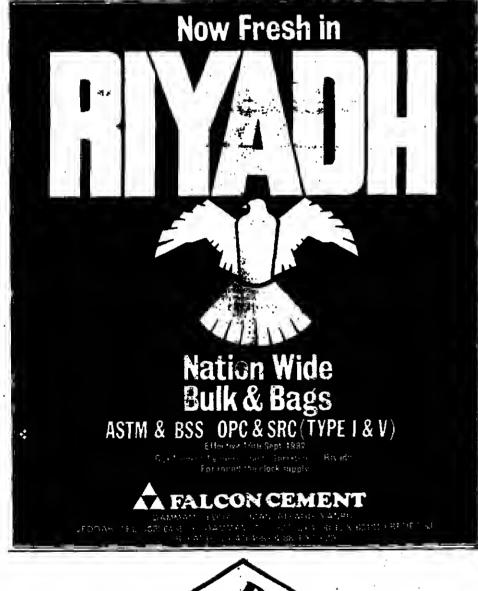

Cairo arrests 2 extremist leaders

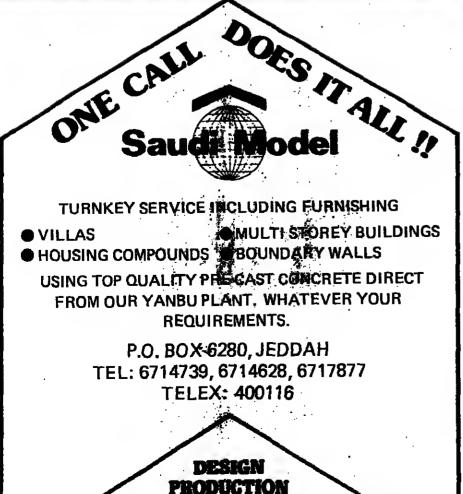

CAIRO, Oct. 9 (R) - Two alleged ringleaders of an outlawed Muslim extremist organization bave been arrested and charged with taking part in a plot to topple Egyptian President Hospi Mubarak, police sources said Saturday.

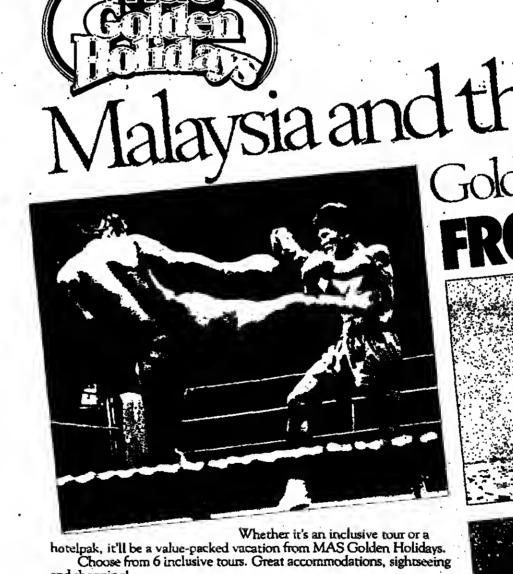

They said police were hunting another prominent member of the Jihad (holy struggle) group on the same charges. Last month, Egyptian security police said they had uncovered a conspiracy by members of the Jihad organization to seize power in Egypt.

The alleged plotters planned to storm jails to free fellow Jihad members held since the assassination of President Anwar Sade, last year, and commit acts of sabotage throughout the country to spread panic, paving the way for a takeover of power, police said.

The arrests bring, to 61 the number of defendants, charged in the case, who will start trial before a security court.

OSLO, Norway, Oct. 9 (AP) - A record number of 79 candidates have been nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize this year, the secretary of the award committee reported Friday, and he expects a winner to be named Jakob Sverdrup said there were two more nominees than last year, when the award went to the office of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees. "The total includes 60individuals and 19 organizations," said the secretary. "I expect the committee to select a winner.

The peace prize has been withheld 19 times, including during most years of both world wars, and there has been speculation this would happen again this year because of the global turnoil.

The nominees include such first-time candidates as U.S.-Middle East peace negotiator. Philip C. Habib, and such perennials as Swedish disarmament campaigner Alva Myrdal. Polish labor leader Lech Walesa, Black South African bishop Desmand Tutu and Soviet human rights activist Yuri Orlov are also on the list.

Self-styled Nobel experts in Osin don't think Walesa, who is still under house arrest by Poland's Communist government, will get it because an award to him would appear to be a political decision unrelated to peace work. The Middle East is too unstable for Habib to win the award.

Nobel awards Most distant quasar found

PASADENA, California, Oct. 9 (AP) -Astronomers reported Friday the discovery of the most distant object ever seen in the heavens - a quasar perhaps 12 billion light-years from earth.

The American, Australian and British team said the celestial object must be very near the edge of the universe. It was seen as little more than a faint speck of light on a photograph taken through a telescope.

The discovery was announced in a news release from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory. Quasars, discovered in 1963, are mysterious nbjects that appear in the sky as starlike objects but seem to be located incredibly far away and to generate more light than 100 billion stars.

Until the new find, designated PKS 2000-330, nn quasars were discovered beyond about 11 billioo light years and some scientists suspected that might represent their nuter limit. That limit, this theory suggests, meant quasars were formed suddenly in some flurry of cosmic activity 11 billinn years ago.

A light-year is a measure of the distance light travels in a year — 6,000,000,000,000 (trillion) miles (9.6 trillion km). "So ynu're looking back in time - that light left it 12 billion years ago," said Mike Klein, a JPL astronomer ant directly involved in the research.

According to the way astronomers commonly determine distance, be said, "this is an object that is farther away than anything else we have seen to date."

The scientists on the team include American Samuel Gulkis, David Jannees and Micbael Batty of Australia's Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organization, Bruce Peterson of the Australian National University, and Anne Savage of the Royal Observatory in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Khmers hail U.N.

BANGKOK, Oct. 9 (AFP) - The Khmer Rouge Saturday hailed the United Nations credentials committee's decision to continue supporting its right to the Cambodian seat as "yet another defeat" for Hanoi and its Soviet backers. A commentary carried by the guerrillas' South China-based radio, monitered here, said Hanoi had been seeking U.N. recconition for its Phnom Penh client for the last three years.

Despite defeats at the 34th, 35th and 36th U.N. General Assemblies, Hanoi again was proposing an empty-seat formula on Cam-bodia this year, it added. The credentials committee decision to support the government of "Democratic Kampuchea" as Cambodia's representative met with strong objections from the Soviet Union.

The most spectacular example was a proposal by new Labor Minister Norbert Bluem that there be a six-month wage freeze. Both industry and trade unionists criticized the proposal, and Kohl said publicly that it had been Bluem's suggestion and not a policy agreed to by the new government.

Kohl was elected by parliament a week ago to replace former Chanceline Helmnt Schmidt, who was unseated by a noconfidence vote. That vote followed more than a year of bickering in Schmidt's coalition, much of which was also caused by endless interviews given by cabinet members.

The ritual became so established it was dubbed "the interview war." Kohl's cabinet has 16 members, but three nf them are carry-overs from the Schmidt government.

panel decision

The Democratic Kampuchea government was nriginally set up by the onsted Khmer Rouge regime, but broadened in June into a tripartite coalition including twn nnn-Communist movements headed by Prince Norodom Sihanouk and his former Premier Son Sann. The 37th General Assembly however, has yet to make a final decision on the issue at a plenary session scheduled for Oct.

The Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin government in Phnom Penh, claiming to be the "sole, legal representative" of Cambodia. has this year formally demanded the expul-sion of the Khmer Rouge from the world body. Its foreign minister Hun Sen has also stressed that Phnom Penh would reject any resolution on Cambodia adopted by a General Assembly it is barred from attending. .

SUPPRESSION IN POLAND

The military regime in Poland has finally dared to delegalize the country's only free trade union, Solidarity.

This act had not been unexpected since the declaration of martial law last year and the arrest and imprisonment of the union's leader

Lech Walesa and his lieutenants. The union and labor freedom in Poland may be dead as similar freedoms in similar Communist regimes have been since the inception of the so-called 'rule of the proletariat' under which the people are supposed to dictate the system of government and the conditions under which they must be ruled. So far such claims by the Communist world have been totally unfounded. In fact communism has ushered a new and more brutal form of despotism while it claims to be founded on popular will which it certainly is not. Therefore, there is nothing unusual about a Communist, totalitarian regime banning a free trade union. The unusual part of the whole Polish story is that a free trade union had been allowed to operate for some time at least. Now it is back to normal. Suppression of liberties, manipulated trade unions subservient press and a rubber stamp parliament. This is the situation in other Communist, despotic, dictatorial, tyrannical regimes everywhere and Poland is no exception. What is really exceptional is the disproportionate reaction of the Western governments and the U.S. in particular to happenings in Poland. When Solidarity was legalized they made a tremendous fanfare about it and devoted page after page of newspapers and hundreds of hours of radio and television time to it. When the martial law was imposed they felt betrayed and flayed the authorities and the Soviet Union for the outrage. President Reagan imposed a few, albeit ineffectual, trade embargoes on the Polish government and threatened it Friday with further punishment although he knows too well that his actions will not bring down the regime or restore Solidarity's legality.

With Poland being no exception in denying free trade union status why does the West single it out for hlame and punishment?

A great number of people, especially the Arabs, will fail to see the logic of such over-reaction to the suppression of free trade unionism in Poland and the comparatively mild attitude taken by the U.S. to the depredations of its protege Israel, in Palestine, Lebanon and other occupied Arab territories. Who is worse, on halance, the Polish junta or the Israeli killers who massacred unarmed civilians and sent out half their force, army and navy to bomb trapped civilians in

Saudi Arabian press review

A Saudi newspaper Saturday severe measures will be taken, deplored what it called the "childish behavior" of Iranian pilgrims in Medinah and commended the firm action taken by the authorities to ensure security in the holy city.

Al-Nadwa condemned the behavior of Iranian pilgrims who organized a demonstration in the Prophet's city and shouted political alogans without any heed to repeated calls made by the authorities to "respect other pilgrims' feelings and not to exploit the pilgrimage occasion for sowing dissension among Muslims." The paper lauded the firm action taken by the security authorities against the culprits who tried to "undermine the state's security.'

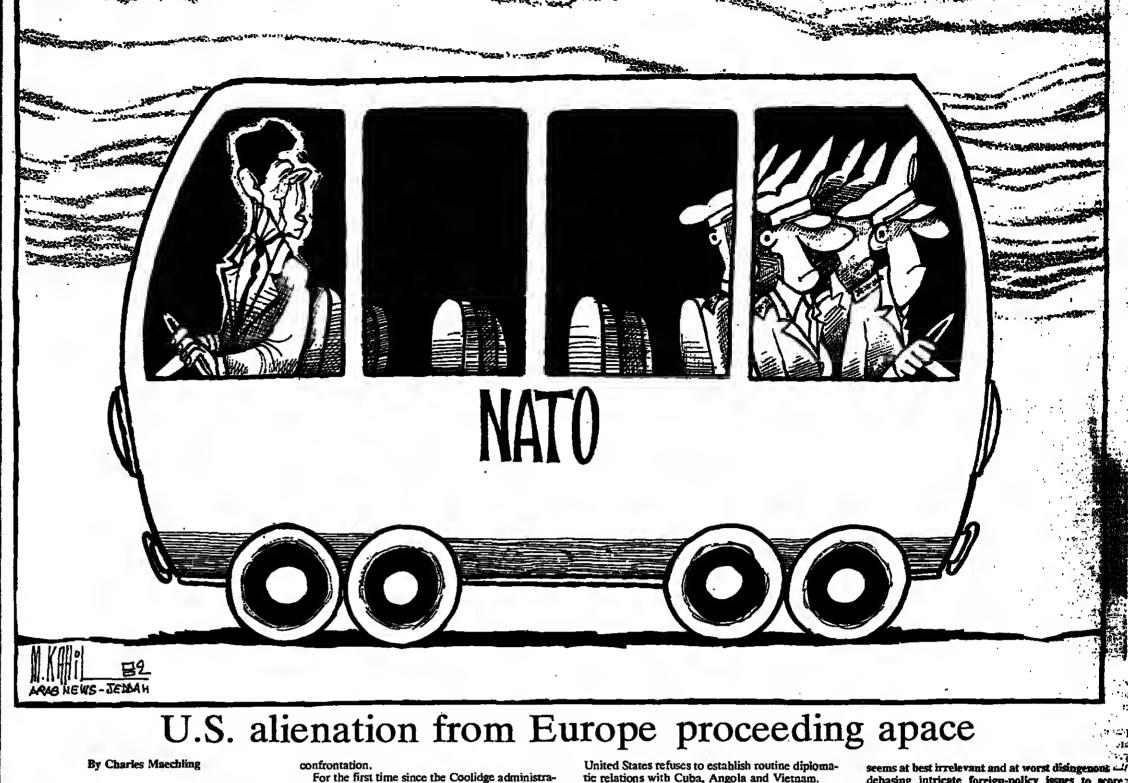

The leader of the Iranian pilgrimage mission, Muhammad Hussein Muosavi Kho'ini, and 70 of his aides were deported to Iran Friday night. An Interior Ministry · spokesman said the measure was taken in view of Kho'ini's persistent instigation of Iranian pilgrims to undertake activities harming the Kingdom's security and distrubing other pilgrims in the performance of their rituals. The spokesman warned that "more security men, were slightly injured in clashes with Iranian instigators' in Medinah the previous night. Al -Nadwa regretted the behavior of Iranian pilgrims and the deterioration of relations among Muslims hecause of a group whose leaders are practicing terrorism against their people and shedding their blood in a destructive war which has already claimed the lives of nearly 200,000 Iranians."

Okaz warned "misguided Iranian pilgrims to stop their childish behavior and try to find for their rancour a place other than the Kingdom." However, we are quite sure that no such place exists on the Islamic map because Iran has been exposed before the Islamic nation as an ill-will state which envies other Islamic states, enjoying security and stability under the Sharia (divine law)," the paper

WASHINGTON -Like a marriage breaking up, the alienauon between Europe and the United States is proceeding apace, accompanied by the usual symptoms of mutual recrimination, non-communication and psychological withdrawal. Unless the trend is arrested, the next step will be separation (withdrawal of U.S. forces?) followed by divorce. For this state of affairs, the Reagan administration is largely responsible.

At a critical period in the economic life of Western Europe, with severe strains on the international monetary system, and with unemployment at unprecedented levels - more than 13 percent in Britain, 9 percent in West Germany - the Reagan administration's policy of tight money and dis-guised protectionism has been a heavy drag on U.S. allies' economics. The administration's unsuccessful attempt to stop shipment of equipment for the Soviet gas pipeline has embittered relations with paired future attempts to develop a unified policy on export credits applicable to trade with the Soviet Union. President Reagan's apparent incapacity to discuss substance on equal terms with European counterparts has eliminated the crucial personal channel through which Dwight D. Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon were able to tion, the political leadership of the United States is provincial in background and isolationist in spirit. In contrast to his predecessors, Reagan has neither the experience nor the intellectual roots to appreciate the problems of Europe and to feel an affinity for European culture. Beyond this, the political agenda on which he was elected, depending as It does on legislation, inevitably gives top priority to domestic issues. The net result is to reinforce an essentially negative, risk-free and non-creative approach to foreign policy — one that hides behind confrontation and is so fearful of compromises of principle that it regards each consultation with allies as a potential trap. Those negative tendencies are particularly noticeable on the economic front. There is overwhelming evidence that the resources of the International Monetary Fund are inadequate to shore up the rickety structure of International credit. Nevertheless, even as the nation with the most at the fund's lending capacity.

Again, having the most at stake in a comprehensive legal regime for the oceans, only the United States among leading maritime nations opposed the recently completed Law of the Sea Treaty. A similar negative attitude has characterized the Reagan approach to arms control and elimination of trade restrictions. Alone among Western nations, the tic relations with Cuba, Angola and Vietnam. The crippling effects of a sterile conservative ideology masquerading as principle is exemplified by the administration's approach to international organizations. In December 1981, it cut off funding for the International Institute of Applied Systems Analysis, a globally accliamed experiment in East-West scientific cooperation, thereby closing off a valuable window to the West for Polish, Czech, Hungarian and Bulgarian scientists.

It has allowed the Israeli membership issue to interfere with full participation in the specialized agencies of the United Nations, to the point of jeopardizing U.S. membership in the vitally important International Atomic Energy Agency, which monitors the shipments and uses of ouclear fuel.

In virtually every sphere, from trade to telecommunications, the Reagan administration has dropped the process of leading the alliance in consultation; preferring to translate its own unrealistic visions into tules of the game that other nations a supposed to live up. To Europe has no time for such hollow gamesmanship. Its leadership is too immersed in economic difficulties to permit trans-Atlantic meddling in such vital matters as the pipeline contracts, agricultural subsidies and export credits, least of all when couched in moral abso-

"The Japanese contribute $1 billion per year for the upkeep of U.S. forces in Japan and Okinawa," he said. BANGKOK -"Coup fever" usually sweeps Thailand in October but there is no sign that Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda is about to be toppled, although opponents say his consensus style of leadership has let the country drifting.

Thailand has seen four successful coups in the past 11 years three of them in October following the annual military reshuffle which results in power shifts within the armed forces. The latest military reshuftle last month has, however only strengthened the position of Gen. Prem, who also enjoys wide support from major political parties.

But at least one political analyst is predicting a 'silent coup" by some army and political factions who would like to push through legislation to extend the term of the present semielected parliament and postpone for another two years a general election scheduled for next April. The elections are to be held under a 1978 constitution designed to promote a better and more organized system of political parties and greatly reduce the legislative role of the military dominated upper house of parli-

The "silent coup" theory comes from Dr. Chaiavanan Samudavanija, a political science professor and former adviser to the prime minister. It would be aimed at prolonging the army legal role in the Gulf people's achievements politics and enabling it to continue as the power

But whatever happens Gen. Prem can expect another four years as prime minister after his curtent term expires next April, according to diplomats and political commentators here.

The soft-spoken general, 62, who was appointed hy parliament to succeed Gen. Kriangsak Choma, in March 1980, has not announced whether he will take part in the proposed polls. The 1978 constitution does not require him to do so.

None of the political parties in the fractious lower house of parliament seriously expects to be able to win an absolute majority in the elections, according to house members. Politicians, who share power with the military in the present government, remain divided and lack a consensus on a recognized leader who could effectively contest the premiership.

The five major parties are now working on campaign strategy aimed at winning sufficient seats to enable them to claim a place in another coalition government, which political analysts say is most likely following the elections. The parties are again expected to turn to Gen. Prem to lead such a coali-

Kukrit Pramoj, the Social Action Party leader and former prime minister, told reporters the present situation called for a prime minister who could smoothly balance the interests of different power groups. '1e was alluding to the military backing Which is considered crucial to the stability of any government. Though Kukrit, 71, has not totally ruled himself out of contention for the top government job, he and most politicians admit privately that Gen. Prem would most likely be renominated for another term. .

The prime minister, whose position was further strengthened last month with the appointment of Gen. Arthit Kamlang-Ek as army chief, indicated three weeks ago that he would not reject such an offer. Gen. Arthit, an ambitious and articulate officer who last year belped Gen. Prem crush an abortive coup by middle-ranked troop commanders has pledged full support for him.

Geo. Prem is generally seen as a cautious leader of integrity and unquestioned devotion to the popular monarchy, but his period in office has been noticeable more for inactivity than decisive action, political analysts say: A major criticism from his opponents is that major policy decisions have not been taken and the country has been allowed to draft, with day-to-day decisions left to the country's highly professional senior civil servants.

The constitution under which the next elections will be held will for the first time require independent candidates to seek party affiliation and to run under a party banner. Voting will be for provincewlde party states rather than district lists.

Among new faces in the elections will be former prime Minister Kriamgsak, leader of the opposition Social Democratic Party. His many followers include prominent army officers dismissed for being involved in the abortive coup last year. Gen. Kriamgsak's group forms a sizable voting block in the lower house but chances of the former premier staging a comeback are considered bright. His previous military backers have all either retired or been moved to respective jobs. (R) debasing intricate foreign-policy issues to score: points in a sterile game of domestic politics. The Europeans do not consider themselves in a state of cold war, and do not see every Soviet move: within the satellite sphere as a chess move in a struggle for world domination.

Is there any way to stich up the alliance? There is, but first it is time Americans realized that U.S. leadership in the Reagan sense is a non-starter, Moreover, the leadership of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization can no longer be treated as a prescriptive right automatically vested in the most powerful member. Today, the largest commitment of ground forces, the greatest exposure to attack and the strongest political personalities are to be. found on the other side of the Atlantic. Collective, leadership is necessary to prevent dissolution.

Collective direction has much to commend it.if consensus cannot be reached otherwise. It was the, pariern of the alliances against both Napoleon and the central powers in World War 1. In most : partiamentary democracies, cabinet government is the rule - even the Soviet Union is governed more by committee than by one man. The united States is unique in its cult of the strong executive. Far better for NATO to be governed by an effective directorate, with a common strategy binding on all members, than by an amiable figurehead deferred to at summit meetings and ignored the rest of the time. The 'other America'

Receotly I finished reading Michael Maclear's book, Vietnam: The Ten -Thousand -Day War, published by Thames / Methuen, U.K., 1982. In many ways this is a unique work. Knowledge of the main eveots of this French and then American war has been takeo for granted by the author. The narrative is based oo first hand testimonies, findings of the principal figures of the war and oo scores of interviews with participants, as recorded by radio, press and television. What this book offers is a rare opportunity to view the extraordinary profile of the "Other America," the world of policymakers, military top brass, top field operators, uoable to distinguish right from wrong, pursuing clearly documented and admitted deception, withholding facts for long periods, preventing corrective action till they were all caught with their pants down, caught by modern technology, caught by television! Americans finally saw the facts, slowly revealed to them in their living rooms. In their painful trauma they took to the streets and parks and demanded "Peace, withdrawal, Vietnam for Vietnamese." No less a person than Sen. William Fulhright, chairman of the Senate hearings oo Vietnam exploded: "So we have been had, as the slang goes, by our own allies influencing our judgment... it is just incredible that a great nation could be so mis-

It is not so incredible, Fulbright! America is being "had" again by another ally, Israel! You have systematically been misguided now for over forty long years. Truth has been prevented from surfacing for too long by the Zionists in America and Europe, and by the gullible supporters of Zionism. They are everywhere, controlling the media, controlling all major educational institutions, controlling Hollywood, controlling the arts, controlling the offices of policymakers, cootrolling major chunks of business and industry; plotting, planning, beloing and promoting each other, helping Israel right or wrong, manipulating the world's largest and strongest democracy at all levels.

However, our Mai Lai massacres took place in Sabra and Shatila. We sincerely hope this will be the beginning of a slow and painful process of fact finding for the Americans and the whole world. They will soon discover the truth behind the creation of Israel, the growth of Jewish clout in America, the massacres in Palestine (1945-1982), plus a million other traumatic discoveries which will soon put Americans hack onto their streets and parks shouting "Peace, Create Palestine, No to Israel."

gainst concern over delicate military balance

tionalist China salutes 1911 Revolution today

TAIPEI (R) - Nationalist China (Taiwan) celebrates its 71st birthday on Sunday against a background of concern over the delicate military balance with the Communist mainland and growing domestic problems.

A decision by its major arms supplier, the United States, to eventually stop selling new weapons to Taiwan, has left the Nationalists feeling increasingly insecure.

On the domestic front, the ruling Nationalist Party is facing a rising challenge from opposition groups, and the economy, once one of the strongest in Asia, is showing signs of stagnation.

For the past 33 years, the Nationalists have saluted the 1911 revolution, which toppled the last Chinese emperor, in Taiwan. They were forced to flee to the island by the victorious Communists in 1949, after a hitter civil war.

Noisy fanfares and military parades are planned but demonstrations of military might are expected to he lackluster. New highperformance U.S. fighters will be absent after Washington rejected Taiwan's repeated requests for sophisticated planes earlier this

The Nationalists suffered another blow two months ago when Washington said it would not sell any new weapons to Taiwan and the arms flow would gradually cease although it did not give a date. The United States also said it supported negotiations aimed at reuniting the Communists and Nationalists, arch rivals for more than 50

Mainland China has in the last few years extended numerous olive branches to Taiwan, including suggesting autonomy for the island. But the nationalists have summarily dismissed all Peking's overtures as mere propaganda and president Chiang Ching-kuo, son of former Nationalist ruler of the mainland, Chiang Kai-shek, called on Peking :. to renounce communism.

- Despite official optimism, some Nationalist officials admit that Taiwan's military position will worsen markedly in a few years if fresh sources of weapons are not found. The military halance of power across the Taiwan largely because the superior weapons of the Nationalists offset the vast numerical advantage of the Communists.

The Nationalists claim the Communists never intended to settle the China problem peacefully and are bent on invading the island at a suitable time. With the gradual reduction in U.S. arms supplies, some defense officials have expressed fears that Taiwan might lose its air superiority nver the straits.

While the Nationalists are looking for alternative arms supplies, they have not abandoned their last hope with Washington, the Taiwan Relations Act. The act, passed by the U.S. Congress in 1979 after the United States recognized mainland China, says that Taiwan should continue to receive U.S. supplies of defensive weapons.

While mobilizing their lohbyists in Washington, many Nationalist officials believe that the United States would not stand idle in the event of a Communist invasion. "Most Asian countries fear the Chinese Communists more than the Soviet Union and would not stand aggression by Peking," one

To most outsiders, the Nationalists' rejection of an apparently attractive peace offer from Peking is a puzzle. But the Nationalists remember that they twice cooperated with the Communists, before and during the World War II, and each time they ended up in a weaker position.

Prime Minister Sun Yun-suan noted the Communist offer on autonomy in exchange. for acceptance of Peking's sovereignty and asked: "If sovereignty were accorded, what would be the meaning of autonomy?"

He cited the case of Tibet, which was given autonomy by Peking in 1957 and was taken over by the Communists almost immediately afterward. The Communists are not Taiwan's only problem. The ruling Nationalist Kuomintang Party is facing an increasing challenge from opposition groups, mainly composed of native Taiwanese.

The opposition, though very disorganized, has improved its results at every election, forcing the Nationalists to bring more native Taiwanese into the government.

The economy, the pride of Taiwan for two decades, has hegun to show signs of stagnating in the last two years with a sharp drop in growth rates. Before 1980, Taiwan averaged annual growth of more than nine percent, one of the highest rates in Asia. But this year, the economy is expected to grow around three to four percent.

Taiwan had a trade surplus of $1.4 hillion last year, but in the first seven months of this year imports dropped by more than 12 percent. But the Nationalists can still boast of a much higher living standard than the Chinese Communists. Per capita income In Taiwan is about $2,700 compared with less than $300 on the Mainland.

As one means of boosting the sagging economy, the government is trying to pull off a coup from under the noses of the Communists by attracting capital away from the British colony of Hong Kong before its lease with China expires in 1997.

Economic Affairs Minister Chao Yao-tung recently predicted that the flight of capital from the colony could he as high as $20 bil-lion between now and 1997. "Overseas Chinese are worried about their future after of the capital outflow," be said.

Japan's most eligible bachelor By Terril Jones

TOKYO (AP) — He is shorter than most of his classmates, with a shy demeanor and a lock of hair that won't stay off his forehead. He is Japan's most eligible bachelor.

Prince Naruhito. a 22-year-old graduate student in Japanese history, is coming of age, and much as in the case of Britain's Prince Charles before he found his Diana, the local press has begun its quest for the proper hride.

Popularly known as Prince Hiro, the eldest grandson of 81-year-old Emperor Hirohito in time will succeed his father. Crown Prince Akihito, to be the 126th emperor to ascend to Japan's 2,600-year-old chrysanthemum throne. Although royal family members in Japan lead relatively secluded, and very noncontroversial lives, the popular press is always trying to catch a glimpse of their private doings, especially when it comes to romance.

Prince Hiro himself confided at the time of his graduation in March from Gakushuin University that he would like someone who is "cheerful, healthy and a good cook."

Weekly tabloids have speculated widely on likely prospects, with the most likely candidates the daughters of several wealthy and genealogically acceptable families. They have been subject to frequent pestering by

The Gendai (modern times) monthly in its October edition says a search for a hride is under way and claims to have obtained a "secret" list of 16 conditions that must be met by a prospective empress. Writer Shigeki Manabe says the list is "the most closely guarded secret of the imperial household agency.

Among the conditions he claims must be met by martial candidates:

- First and foremost she must be a Japanese citizen.

 Her religion must be Buddhism or Shintoism. A baptized Christian is unacceptable. unless she renounces her faith.

-She must not have any inherited disease, and it is preferable that she come from a family that has produced numerous male offspring. - She must be a few years younger than the prince, and consequently need not necessarily have a college education. A special course of studies could he arranged for her if - A certain degree of fluency in foreign languages at the time of marriage is essential. especially in English and French. - She must stand shorter than the prince when she wears high heels. Hiro is only 163 cm tall, so his wife; writes Manabe, must stand less than 157 cm. - She must never have worked as what the Japanese call an "O.L.," (office lady), a company clerk. Such employment means she would have former superiors, which is unacceptable for an empress. - It is preferable that she not have attended a coeducational school. She must not be colorblind or have bad eyesight.

Plagued by Andrew affair, intruder

Tense 6 months for Elizabeth and subjects

By Ejih M. Lederer

LONDON (AP) - Queen Elizabeth II has faced an unprecedented six months of anxiety about ber pilot son Prince Andrew, her personal safety and the success of her country in the distant Falklands War. Never before in her 30-year reign have the queen's 56 million subjects been so alarmed about the security of their sovereign.

In public, the queen has remained unflappahle, symbol of the monarchy she helped restore to its respected position after the abdication of her uncle, the Duke of Windsor, to marry American divorcee Wallis Simpson.

Privately, Buckingham Palace officials said the queen was deeply concerned, like any mother, when 22-year-old Andrew sailed with Britain's biggest task force since the 1956 Suez crisis to help recapture the Falklands from Argentina. Co-pilor of an anti-submarine helicopter, he acted as a decoy against deadly Exocet missiles.

She welcomed him back last month at Plymouth Harbor, shedding a rare public tear of happiness and smiling broadly for the first time in months. The queen flew to Australia earlier this week on the first leg of a Commonwealth tour, about the time Prince Andrew left for a Caribhean holiday on the secluded island of Mustique with American-born actress Koo Stark, who has appeared nude in erotic movies.

Buckingham Palace denied a report in the tabloid Sun newspaper that the queen had ordered Andrew home, and refused comment on an earlier Sun story claiming the monarch was "in a rage" about her son dating the star of nude films. "We don't know what the queen feels on this," a spokeswoman said.

The British press has splashed topless photos of 25-year-old Miss Stark on its front pages. Several papers noted that Andrew's ancestors were often attracted to exotic women and columnists argued he should be allowed to enjoy his vacation even though he had embarrassed his mother and undoubtedly offended some of her sub-

. There was more than emharrassment last July 5 when a scruffy intruder who later claimed be was in love with the queen broke into her bedroom at Buckingham Palace. Unemployed drifter Michael Fagan, 30, sat on her bed for 10 minutes, dripping blood on her bedcovers from a cut finger before she could summon a maid and a footman.

to the royal family that he was called by his' first name, was forced to resign eight days later after admitting an illegal affair.

The dual security breach sparked a public outcry and a major overhaul of measures to protect the queen. When she retreated to Balmoral Castle in Scotland for her annual eight-week break in August, a palace spokesman admitted she had been "distressed hy some recent events' and was looking forward to a vacation.

But then came rumors in the British press of a rift in the marriage of the queen's only daughter, Princess Anne, whose former husband Mark Phillips skipped her 32nd hirthday party on Aug. 15.

The queen's youngest son, 18-year-old Prince Edward, long considered the "egghead" of the royal children, also made beadlines when his leaked school grades turned out 10 be mediocre.

The state prosecutor didn't pursue charges against Fagan for breaking into the bedroom of the 56-year-old monarch, because nnder British law trespassing is a

If that wasn't enough, the queen's personal bodyguard, Michael Trestrail, so close civil not a criminal offense.

But Fagan was tried for stealing a halfbottle of Prince Charles' liquor during an earlier palace hreak-in. When a jury acquitted him in 14 minutes, because the prosecution failed to prove criminal intent, there was public dismay. "There are times when to call the law an ass is to insult asses," said a London Daily Mirror editorial.

Fagan was also charged with assaulting his 14-year-old stepson but acquitted when the boy failed to sbow up in court. That left a car theft complaint, to which he pleaded

At his trial, psychiatrists for the defense and prosecution agreed he was mentally ill and one said his delusions posed a serious danger to the queen. Last Tuesday, Fagan was committed indefinitely to a top-security mental hospital. After Fagan was sentenced, his lawyer released a letter of apology to the queen in which he expressed his love and said: "-Please excuse my intrusion into your privacy - I didn't realize h would become a world topic.. All I wanted to do was discuss my personal problems... You were wonderfully understanding."

Teddy in training for presidential marathon

WASHINGTON. (AP) - As the 1984. presidential marathon approaches, Sen. Ted Kennedy is like an athlete in training, running hard on the local track and dreaming of the big one.

His hair is shorter, his weight down. He has replaced the old bifocals, which teetered on his nose, with modish aviator-style glasses. And he is spending $2 million on an almost sure-bet Senate re-election race in Massachusetts while crisscrossing the nation, testing anti-president Reagan themes in appearances for Democratic candidates.

Kennedy insists he has not yet decided whether to run in 1984, but there is no question he is giving the presidential race careful consideration. And if he decides to run, he won't be coy about his intentions.

"He feels that in 1980 we weren't prepared," said Boh Shrum, Kennedy's press secretary."Tho much time went into whether he should run and not enough into deciding how to execute the race if he did. I hope we've learned." In seeking his fifth term in the United States Senate, Kennedy faces Republican husinessman Ray Shamie on Nov. 2. He is expected to win easily.

His Senate campaign includes $850,000 worth of television commercials that address problems that plagued Kennedy's 1980 presidential bid: Persistent references to the 1969 campaign including auto accident, his failed marriage and rumors of romantic escapades. His pending divorce from Joan Kennedy, announced the day after President Ronald Reagan's inauguration, is described as "coming" by aides. They won't say when.

Kennedy is a lightning rod for conservative political groups. "The right wingers hate him, and it's deep hatred," Shrum said in an interview. "Even if they think they can't defeat him, they'll kick him as hard as possible. That is one of the real reasons for (Kennedy's character-oriented) television commercials."

Robert Kennedy, both of whom were assassinated) as a compassionate family man who has not let a series of family tragedies keep him down. In one ad. a constituent alludes to the senators past troubles by saying. "he's no plaster saint."

The ads come at a time when a conservative group called the Life Amendment Political Action Committee is mailing Massachusetts voters a 37-page comic book called Every Family Has One. Its subtitle: Even a black sheep can make it .. especially if he 's a rick Black Sheep.

Gary Curran, the committee's press spokesman, said that since last July 500,000 copies of the comic have been mailed and the group expects to mail an additional 1.5 million copies before election day.

Conservatives aren't the only ones who dislike Kennedy. Earlier this month, former President Jimmy Carter. a Deniocrat, complained: "Even after Kennedy was mathematically descated, when there was no possibility of his winning the (1980) nomination, he refused to support me and (former Vice President Walter) Mondaie."

At this point, national polls show Kennedy far shead of Mondale in the undeclared race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

With better survival chances

Transplants increasing in

By Didier Fanqueux

WASHINGTON. (AFP) - Despite a shortage of donors there is a new surge of organ transplant operations in the United States. where the chances of survival for recipients have greatly increased in the last few years. In 1981 more than 5,000 Americans underwent an organ transplant - an operation which in the early 1970s was somewhat rare because of body rejection of the transplanted organ. The American medical world's greater interest in transplant operations has followed recent progress in treatment enabling the recipient to wage an effective fight against such rejection.

Dr. Barry Kahan, a surgeon at the University of Houston (Texas) explained: "The wonderful thing about transplantation is that it gives terminally ill patients who cannot be helped by drugs or surgery a choice between life and death.

At the beginning of the 1970s, heart transplants in the United States averaged 22 annually, but in the first six months of this year 56 were carried out.

The estimated survival rate one year after a heart transplant has risen from 22 percent in the 1960s and 1970s to 60-70 percent today. Recent surveys here show that half the patients who have heart transplants can expect to live at least five more years, and perhaps longer.

ARE YOU TOO OLD

TREATMENT?

FOR HYPERTENSION

Stanford University, California, which is considered the leading heart transplant center in the United States, numbers 242 heart transplant patients and one of them is still alive 12 years after his operation. Equally encouraging results have been transplants of the liver — needing an eight-hour opera-tion, or even longer — which is much more complex than a heart transplant.

Dr. Thomas Starzl of the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center who pioneered this operation - he has carried out 257 since 1963 — has noted that the survival rate during the first 12 months after the operation has risen in the past few years from 38 percent to 70 percent for children and from 27 percent to 68 percent for adults. Similar results are recorded for kidney transplants, one of the most common in the United States at just under 5,000 annually,

The kidney, unlike other organs, can be taken from corpses as well as living donors. A person can live quite normally with only one

One of the main reasons for the growing success of organ transplants is probably the introduction into the United States in 1979 of a new drug, cyclosporine, manufactured by the Sandoz Pharmaceutical firm. This drug helps the body to fight the phenomenon of rejection of the new "foreign" organ but at present it is being used here only experimentally and is not in general service. Once cyclosporine treatment has been started it must be continued for the rest of the patient's life.

It has given renewed hope to such American heart transplant pioneers as Dr. Denton Cooley of Houston, who suspended his operations because of reject dangers. But recently he announced that he planned to carry out 33 heart transplants in the next two years, and would treat his patients with cyclosporine.

Organ transplant surgeons often complain that they lack donors, causing about 8,000 Americans to await a kidney transplant and 2,000 a heart transplant.

Dr. Frank Veith, chief lung transplant surgeon at a New York, medical center estimates that 30 patients have died in recent years in his hospital owing to a lack of a

Although some Americans carry cards saying that in the event of death their organs can he used for transplants, in many cases this is refused by their family. Many medical experts believe that the general public has to be educated about organ transplants just as it had to be educated about donating blood.

As Dr. Veith pointed out: "The problem must be addressed not only by us as transplanters - we are the ones who are always accused of being grave robbers - but also by

Some American hospitals are opposed to organ transplants on the grounds of cost $55,000 for a heart and $25,000 for a kidney.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Does morphine have the same effect on younger and older patients? My daughter had a severe injury some months ago and required morphine. An aunt of mine who suffers from pain in cancer is kept comfortable practically all day by one injection. My daughter needed several injections when she was laid up. How do you account for that? - Mrs. L.

Dear Mrs. L.: Much depends upon the intensity of the pain in each patient. And then, you don't know the dosage. Your aunt may have received as much in one dose as your daughter did in several injections. But let's suppose the pain was similar in each. It's often true that pain relief does last longer in the elderly after pain-controlling drugs. Patients 70-89 years have longer relief, compared to other age groups. One explanation is that morphine is eliminated from the system more slowly in the elderly.

For Mrs. A.: Alzheimer's disease is a serious complication in some elderly patients. There's a loss of brain cells. This results in reduced memory and poor intellectual functioning. There are personality changes, depression and disorientation. Unfortunately, there's no known cause or cure.

Java awaits avalanches

GARUT, Indonesia, (AP) - West Java, covered with ashes from multiple eruptions of Mount Galunggung volcano, awaits a second disaster later this month when monsoon rains drench the region.

No spectacular eruptions are expected from the 2,168-meter mountain, which awoke from a 64-year sleep in April. The eruption cycle seems to be ending after 35 major hlasts and more than 300 smaller ones, said John A. Katili, a volcanologist in the department of mines and energy in Jakar ta.

The threat is from 20 million cubic meters of ash, rock and other dehris high on the flanks of the volcano. If heavy rains start as forecast in the third week of October, avalanches and massive mud flows could endanger more than 300,000 people and devastate the rich farming area.

Scientists are keeping tabs on another 61 million cubic meters of ash already deposited in three nearby rivers. "It could take as long as 15 years to recover from this," said Gordon W. Weirc, a senior United States geologist attached to a joint Indonesia-American science and technology project in nearby Bandung.

More than 30,000 people have been evacuated from the immediate vicinity, some permanently. But the official 148.2-squarekilometer danger zone holds another 230,000 and there are 176,300 more in a 157.5 square-km area.

A report issued at a recent workshop on volcanic risk management" in Bandung said that "lahar" - the Indonesian word for cold lava, ash and other dehris already emitted -will flow in the coming rainy season, causing serious damage. The 20,000 residents of the town of Tasikmalaya, 17 km from the crater, are on notice to flee when such a warning

Katili said no deaths have been hlamed on the volcanic eruptions, but at least 62 persons with asthma and other respiratory ailments are suffering from the dust and ash that enshrouds West Java.

The ash absorbs moisture and this added weight has caused the fronds of thousands of coconut palms to sag in seeming defeat. The red clay roof tiles Indonesia inherited from Dutch colonial days are now coated gray. Roofs nearest the volcano collapsed under the extra weight, Ash is piled up on both sides of the roads as though tropical slush left over from a blizzard of hlack snow, Plastic sacks given villagers to fill with ash are piled in retaining walls against still more drifting dust.

Eyes become irritated by the fine grit. The conversations of those people who live in the area are marked by coughs and throatclearing sounds. Many wear masks, and some peasants prowl their desolate fields in makeshift boods.

Only tough guys win American campaigns

By Robert Yoakum

More than ever before, according to people who measure such things, American voters value toughness in their candidates. Qualities like intelligence, compassion, experience, and humor rate lower in the polls than they have in the past. Charges of soft on crime and soft on defense will be heard increasingly as the November elections approach.

Jimmy Whipsnade, candidate for president of the senior class, Big Bass Bay High School, had been called in to see his advisor. Morgan Penmaster.

"I thought you ought to know, Jimmy," the teacher said, "that several people are upset at the tough tone your campaign has

"You mean teachers?" "Well, yes, most of the people I've heard from are teachers." "They don't vote so they don't count."

"That's not a very nice attitude, Jimmy." "Who ever said you had to be nice to get elected? My dad says nice guys finish last. These days you gotta be tough. Like my dad says, Charles Bronson or Clint Eastwood would make perfect presidents."

"So you think that only tough guys win ampaigns? What about Thomas Jefferson, the Adamses, James Madison, Ahraham incoln, and the rest?"

"They were hundreds of years ago. Things have changed."

"Mmmm. But Jimmy, this isn't a national or state contest. You're only running for a high school office. Is it necessary to drag the death penalty issue into a school election?"

"Sure. That's what the voters want. In politics you got to stay ahead of the pack. How do you think Reagan got to be president? He was tougher than that wimp Car-

"Did your father tell you that, too?" Yeah. He said Carter was against the death penalty, guns, and defense, and in favor of welfare cheats, Vietnam draft dodgers, and cream puff judges,"

"I gather that your father follows the issues closely."

"You bet! He says the only way to clean up the country is to have the death penalty for traitors, drug dealers, pornographers, muggers, welfare cheaters, and people that don't believe in God,"

"He's a real hard-liner, eh?" "Not compared to my mother. She used to think that Reagan was tough, but now she's decided that he smiles too much. She says she misses Gen. Haig, who was, uh..." "Secretary of state."

"Right. She says he could stare down a rattlesnake." "I see. What do your parents do.

Jimmy?"

"He's a salesman. She sells cosmetics." "Well, let's get hack to the school election. You're making some hlatant appeals to ethnic votes and - "I made some what to what?" "In other words, it's rare in school elections for a candidate to promise things like increased military aid to Israel or guns for the Irish Republican Army or support for the Polish labor union. Was that your father's idea. too?" "Yeah. He's sort of my unofficial campaign manager. He says I also ought to come out against sex on TV. But our poll showed that that would lose me votes, so I didn't do it."

"You take polls?!"

"Of course! I don't take a stand on anything before we've run it through the math department's computer. Like sex education, for example. My dad's against that too, but the computer showed that ninety percent of the students were for it. So I had to go against the old man on that one, too." "Does the polling system show how you're doing?" "Yeah. I got a two-to-one lead with ten percent undecided."

"It looks as though you've got the election sewed up."

"Maybe. Maybe not. Dad says that overconfidence lost a lot of elections. But he's got a sure-fire plan to swing some of those undecideds over to me."

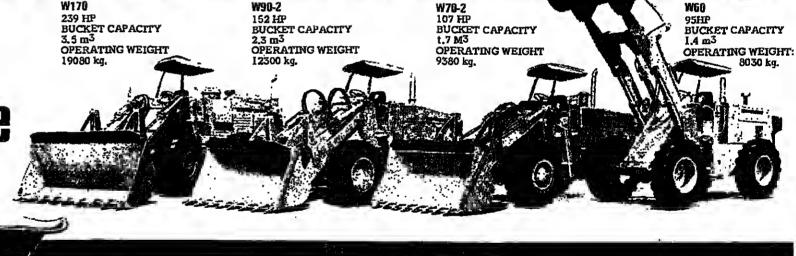

"What's that?" "I'm gonna accuse my opponent of being soft on communism. The old man says it works every time."

Proliferation of slums

Decaying cities cause major concern in Asia

BANGKOK (Depthnews) - Inner cities are collapsing in most of Asia, with the problem becoming more acute m the region's developing countries.

Sharing the same "miseropolis" experience are residents of Metro Manila. Jakarta. Bangkok. Bombay. Karachi. Chittagong. Penang. Shanghai and other cities. And in much of these densely populated areas, the situation may worsen before it gets better. The solution depends on bow fast and effectively local and national governments can implement policies or programs designed to make these cities more livable.

Signs of inner city collapse are many and unmistakahle. says the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP). The seemingly anstoppable proliferation of slums or squatter colonies, rising crime rates, massive but wasteful consumption of imported fuel, high unemployment rates and deterioration of physical and social infrastructures are the more visible indications.

There are other equally disturbing though less perceptible problems arising from exploding cities according to situation reports presented during a regional congress of local authorities for development of human sertlements in the region. The congress was co-sponsored by ESCAP.

For instance, people tend to be claustrophobic when cramped too long in the ghettos of crowded cities. And seeing no immediate prospects for improvement in living conditions, they turn to mischiefs and petty

Particularly in the developing nations. inner city collapse is becoming more severe. observes ESCAP. This is due to their economies' dual structure - a relatively affluent hut small modern sector and a large low-income "informal" sector.

The informal sector is the poor, Their plight is reflected in the growth of slums and marginal settlements, severe lack of sanitation, inadequate water supply, poor sewerage and transportation, unemployment, inadequate housing, schools and medical care,

According to ESCAP, the dismal faifure of local governments in both the few developed and many developing countries emerged as the major problem in the decay of cities.

While urban decay has elicited concern of national governments, situation reports turned in hy city or local governments indicate that their efforts to nudge the problem toward a solution have been half successful. at best.

In most cases, the initial response is to try to arrest growth of large cities and improve on their development "by removal of slums. hy implementation of master plans regarding land-use and by trying to establish green belts' around their current boundaries," reports ESCAP.

These efforts seem inadequate as underscored by the: Continued growth of the cities, specially

The adoption of an integrated approach to the problem only triggers a paradoxical tendency toward territorial and functional fragmentation due to "ambivalent attitude" of national governments toward local authorities.

Lack of adequate financing and participa-tion of urban residents are hobbling current efforts at arresting inner city collapse, according to ESCAP. It describes the demand for financing as "considerable because of the magnitude of services required by the concentrated population, the high cost of such services, and the need to maintain certain

ESCAP says these skills are required to deal with such hasie city services as solid waste collection and disposal, water and sewerage systems, traffic management. organization of transport, property valuation and tax management.

New demands on efficient city management also call for collection and dissemination of information, strategic and corporate planning, project preparation skills, choice of projects applying simple methods of evaluation, public information and communication and manpower development.

While city governments may feel discriminated upon in the allocation of national revenues, ESCAP says national governments should balance the needs of cities with those of the entire country to ensure minimum standards as a whole.

Focusing on lack of participation by city residents in efforts at combating urban decay, ESCAP observes that representative government continues as the best means of getting citizen involvement into play. And in cities not run by elected local governments, there are increasing efforts to enlist people's participation at the grassroots by means of community organizations, neighborhood associations and public interest groups.

City residents usually shy away from participation because they do not have the time. resources and ability to comprehend urban problems objectively.

Satellite rescues air crash victims

By Thomas O' Toole

GREENBELT. MD. (WP) - Three men badly injured in the crash of a light plane in the backwoods of Canada recenty were rescued the following day when a Soviet satellite passing overhead at 17,500 miles an bour radioed their location to a ground station near Ottawa, 1,600 miles from the crash site.

"This is the first time a satellite was the source for pinpointing the location of an air crash anywhere in the world," said Bernie Trudell; manager of satellite air rescue operations for the Goddard Space Flight Center.

"We helieve this was the first use of a major new tool in worldwide air and sea rescue operations."

The three men had crashed their plane in the Canadian rockies, in a beavily wooded valley 3.500 feet deep with mountains on-each side that blocked their rescue beacon from passing planes. The 50-foot trees and 7,000-foot mountains were no obstacle to their beacon finding the Soviet satellite, however. The day after the crash, It flew almost directly overhead at an alotude of 600 miles. The precise way the beacon worked, the involvement of a Soviet satellite in the rescue operation and the speed with which the three miured men were rescued are all part of an ingenious satellite rescue operation worked up by the United States, Canada, the Soviet Union and France over the last seven years.

Still in the experimental stage, the fournation satellite rescue scheme came off the drawing boards three months ago when the Soviets put into orbit the first of five satellites that eventually will cover the earth. listening for the distress signals of planes and ships.

The beacon on board the plane downed in the Canadian Rockies was a standard aircraft radio transmitting a steady siren at frequencies of 121.5 and 243 megahertz, the two most commonly used distress signals in the skies. Aboard the Soviet satellite was a receiver and a repeater to rebeam the distress signal to the ground. Also aboard the satellite was a transponder that calculates the beacon's position on the ground hy measuring how the signal hunches np as it gets elose and fans out as it moves away.

This is what we call doppler location. Trudell said . "It worked so well even with all satellite was no more than nine miles off the exact crash location."

Read this week in

Even more precise methods of rescue location are planned. An American satellite to be put into orbit next spring will be equipped with a new receiver-transmitter that will listen and send signals at a frequency of 406 megshertz, such a broad handwidth that it will carry 10 times as much information as the antenna on the Soviet satellite.

Not only will the new signal pinpoint posi-tion more precisely, it will be able to tell whether the distressed party is a plane or ship, small or large, on fire (if a ship) or just sinking, the country of origin, the wing number (if a plane) and the time the crash or sinking occurred.

Imsgine what this will mean to the maritime people." Trudell said. "It is very important for a rescue party to know if a vessel is sinking or on fire." The trouble with satellite rescue of air crash victims. Trudell conceded, is the same as with any kind of rescue of a downed airplane. When planes crash, their beacons often crash with them and don't give out a signal for anyone to hear. Trudell said only 35 percent of aircraft rescue heacons survive the crash.

Japanese turn closer to Western type

MANILA (Depthnews) - The Japanese government recently came out with a report. which confirms what people have been noticing all along. "Japanese society is moving closer to an American or European type of society."

The report, called the 1981 White Paper on National Life, analyzed the ways in which attitudes toward living have changed under the low economic growth brought about by the oil crisis of the '70s.

What is interesting is that the report considers the liberation of the Japanese woman as a primary indicator of the Westernization of Japanese society.

More women are emerging from the traditional confinement at home to work parttime and participate in more leisure activities. The husbands, on the other hand, are becoming increasingly aware of the need to share, household chores with their wives.

I fully agree with the report's conclusion that women are getting more liberated. However, I would like to take issue with the way they equate women's liberation with moving toward a Western form of society. One does not necessarily mean the other.

There are many societies throughout Asia whose women have been the traditional leaders. These groups — called matriarchal societies — have through the years invested on the women more rights of inheritance, of governance, than 10 men.

The Japanese white paper should have concluded that their society is growing more enlightened with the important role women can play. The emergence of women in traditional Japanese society should not be mistaken for Westernization, although the Americans were the most vocal advocates for women's rights.

This enlightenment is largely a result of Japan's affluence, It was bound to happen. And it is not necessarily an indication of the Westernization of society. Affluence gave the Japanese more leisure time and in a way, it created labor shortages. Women easily filled . in this role.

Despite the report's conclusions, however, it is heartening to note that there is a gradual change in the traditional concept that women stay at home to run the household while the men work outside.

In 1972, 52 percent of the men and 49 percent of the women polled approved of this concept but hy 1979, this had declined to 35 percent among the men and 29 percent among the women.

More and more women are working now, mostly part-time jobs. This is indicative that ... women are having fewer children and spend- '- . ing less time on child care.

The first ship to load liquid petroleum gas from Aramco's new fractionation plant and export terminal at Yanhu left for Italy last week. The start of commercial liveries highlight the growing role of the Red Sea port.

U.S. objects to hike in OECD aid to U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, Oct. 9 (AFP) - The United States has objected to a proposal that would raise financial contributions to the United Nations from Western industrialized countries and Japan while decreasing the quota borne by Socialist nations.

Speaking for the U.S. before the General Assembly budgetary committee, Senator J. Bennett Johnston (democrat of Louisiana) rejected a plan to increase the current fell back closer to their recent depressed levels here this week as chartering became more popular out of Iran's main oil terminal at Kharg Island. There was still, however, a premium available for those vessels willing to load at Kharg. The decision by BP shipping to disposing one-third of its tanker for trading or demolition served to underline the serious state of the world tanker market, brokers said.

The London-hased tanker broker A.E. Gibson estimated that world tanker figures are now "fast approaching" 70 millioo deadweight tons, compared with 55.9 million tons in mid-September. But it added that the market was still "grossly over-tonnaged"

Soviets admit crop failure

MOSCOW, Oct. 9 (AP) — Agriculture Minister Valeotin Mesyats indicated Friday that the Soviet Unioo suffered another disappointing grain harvest this year, the fourth in a row.

Speaking at a Moscow conference of Soviet agricultural specialists, Mesyats said overall output of Soviet farms in 1982 was below target in many regions.

One should self-critically admit that in the past year in many regions, districts and separate republics, gross farm production turned out to be lower than planned levels," the minister said in a speech broadcast on the main evening oews program.

Mesyats said weather cooditions had been very unfavorable during 1982, but that it would be "incorrect" to hlame the weather for the unsatisfactory farm performance.

The climate cannot be changed, be said, and farms have to adopt their techniques to conditions of nature. "This is not a simple matter. But bread is never easily come by,"

Mesyats did not give a figure for the expected grain harvest, but his speech suggested that the Kremlin was preparing the population for more shortages. The U.S. Agriculture Department last month forecast a Soviet grain harvest of 170 million metric tons — more than 60 million tons below assessment of 71.81 percent charged to members of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) to 73.60 percent in 1983-1985.

The OECD, which includes the United States, is a Paris-based secretariat of 24 leading Western industrialized nations and Japan. Senator Johnston warned that in both the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives, support for U.N. budgetary expenditures "is minimal and dwindling steadily. The contributions committee, applying a formula adopted a year ago, has proposed that the quota assigned to Socialist states, excluding Romania and Yugoslavia, be reduced from 16.97 to 15.18 percent. The General Assembly last year ruled that assessments would be based on national and per capita income averaged over the 10 previous years. Senator Johnstoo Friday argued that such a formula ignores the economic tem has been an enormous failure". He said the proposed payment schedule would mean that 80 percent of the U.N. hudget would be financed by teo percent of the member states. The U.S. currently pays 25 percent of the U.N.'s operating budget while the Soviet Union is charged 12.95 per-target and the fourth consecutive poor crop.

to make up for the shortfalls. The United States could meet about half the Soviet needs under current agreements. Canada and Argeotina are the other major sources of supply for the Russians. The Soviets claim to produce eoough grain to meet bread and flour needs of the populatioo and say that grain purchased abroad is used for cattle feed. Soviet President Leonid L. Brezhnev has given top priority to alleviating harvest problems under a long-range farm investment program aimed at solving the Soviet Union's ehronic "food problem," Mesyats said state and collective farms must apply scientific methods and copy the experience of the country's most successful farms to ensure better harvests in the future.

Among the officials listening to Mesyat's address was Mikhail Gorbachev, the member of the Communist Party's ruling politburo who has overall responsibility for Soviet agriculture

Algerian gas sales to net $860m more

ALGIERS, Oct. 9 (AFP) - Algeria will earn an extra 4,000 million dinars ($860 million) next year from the new higher price it is charging its major clients for natural gas, the state-owned oil company Sonatrach has said

Sonatrach officials, taking part in a televised discussion added that the increased revenue to 1985 would be as much as 7,000 million dinars ($1.5 billion).

The oil body renegotiated gas contracts with Belginm in April last year, and with France, two United States gas companies and Italy this year.

Algeria's deal with Italy for the annual export of 12,500 cubic metres of gas for 25 years will oet Sonatrach 10,000 million dinars ($2.1 billioo) a year. The accord is due for signing on Oct. 20.

The gas will be delivered through a trans-Mediterranean pipeline which will cross Tunisia and thereby earn Tunis around $71 million a year in transit rights. The pipeline will be opened officially soon after Oct. 20.

Sooatrach's priocipal oegotiator, Youcef Yoosfi, acknowledged that Algeria's negotiating sessions with its European and American clients had sometimes degenerated mto an out-and-out confrontation.

Car sales drop 4.5% in Britain

LONDON, Oct. 9 (AFP) — Car sales in Britain in September were 4.5 percent down on a year earlier, with registrations totaling 114,044 against 120,000, the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders has said.

This followed a boom month in August when sales totaled 301,977, a figure 22.8 percent up oo a year earlier. August is always a good selling mooth because on Aug. I a letter oo number plates changes at the start of the oew registratioo year.

Car industry executives said the September turndown was disappointing in view of the end of hire purchase restrictions in July, the drop in the cost of credit, and substantial promotioo by manufacturers.

Registrations in the first nine months of this year came to 1,244,011 against, 1,112,932 a rise of 2.65 percent. Foreign car sales in September were 58.7 perceot of the total sold, against 55.7 perceot a year earlier. In the first nine months they were 58.2 percent against 55.8 percent.

Wall Street

Spectacular rally sweeps investors off feet

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP) — The guest of honor has yet to put in an appearance, but Wall Street's wild party is still going

The revelers in the stock market smashed more volume records in the past week, in the process of bidding prices up to a 15month high in the rush of activity, no one seemed very concerned that the ostensible cause of the celebration - a recovery from the U.S. recession - was nowhere in sight.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 79.11 to 986.85, its second biggest weekly gain ever and not far short of the record of $1.24 points set Ang. 16-20.

Thursday was the busiest single session ever at the New York Stock Exchange, with 147.07 millioo shares changing hands. For the week, Big Board Volume totaled 488_31 million shares, compared with the all-time high of 549.90 million in the last full week of August.

With almost three months left in 1982, turnover on the NYSE is fast closing in on the yearly record of 11.85 billion shares established in 1981. The exchange's composite index posted a 4.99 gain to 75.00 for the week, while the American Stock Exchange market value index was up 16.02 at 299.14.

To some, it seemed illogical, and maybe even foolish, for investors to be scrambling to buy stocks in the same week that the government was reporting the rise of the unemployment rate past 10 percent for the first time in more than 40 years.

But believers in the rally maintained that hopes for a business recovery shouldn't be abandoned just because it had been delayed. The further interest rates fall, they argued, the better the chances for a sustained pickup in economic activity in the Many Wall Streeters also concluded the Federal Reserve had made a decision this past Tuesday that was likely to raise the odds of a recovery. These was widespread speculation that the central bank, aware of the economy's persistent woes, was willing to "look the other way" for a few weeks if the mooey supply should keep growing faster than desired. "We believe the Fed will sooo abandon 'macho monetarism'," said Edward Yardeni, economist at E. Hutton and Co., in a commentary issued Friday, Minutes later, Pittsburgh's Mellon Bank became the first commercial bank to drop its prime lending rate below 13 percent setting it at 12 % percent effective Tuesday.

At the same time, some analyst noted, the market's rally could contain an element of self-fulfilling prophecy. "This big rise in the stock and bond markets alone will add several billion dollars in consumer buying power," observed Eldon Grimm, an analysi at the firm of Birr, Wilson and Co. As the festivities proceeded apace, not everyone was in a position to enjoy them. however, skeptics who had sold short - in effect, banking on a market decline by selling borrowed stock - were finding themselves on a limb that grew longer and shakier as prices continued to rise.

At least a half dozen prominent forecasters have been writing off the buying spree. as temporary and unwarranted ever since it began. Last Monday, just before-prices took off again, one skeptie declared that a "long-overdue decline" was beginning. The sively wrong, of course.

The schemes will provide cover for staff of companies with interests overseas, foreign oationals and expatriates, and for individuals resident abroad in excess of 12 months. Companies can apply to take up the schemes, even if they are not coverd by an existing BUPA group. Eligible dependants and single children could be included.

Launching the schemes, Derek Allan, general manager of BUPA's marketing and international operations, said "I believe that after many years of experience as the leader of medical health insurance schemes in the U.K. we are now best able to develop and present to new, as well as existing subscribers the best health insurance protection that can be obtained in the world. In addition to the 3 million covered in the U.K. BUPA already protects many thousands of people in countries throughout the world, and the experience we have had has given us an extremely broad and firm hase for these new schemes" The scheme will be administered by the BUPA international branch located in Brighton, which has expert knowledge and many years of experience in dealing with interna-tional claims relating to medical health and treatment throughout the world.

The company said Friday in a statement that it has asked a Milan court for "controlled administration" in an attempt to straighten out its difficult financial situation.

Under controlled administration, the company's assets will be frozen and it will be granted protection from its creditors for up to

The cause of Rizzoli's recourse to controlled administration is an unexpected request by several banks that the company repay 120 billion lire ($84 million) worth of its debt, the statement said. It is widely expected that the company will sell Corriers Della Sers, Italy st leading daily with a circulation of 590,000.

Lowest in 3 years

ed cuts discount rate to 9.5% ranked among

WASHINGTON, Oct 9 (Agencies) -The Federal Reserve Board said it was cutting its principal lending rate by half a percentage point to 9.5 percent, its lowest level in more than three years. The Fed said its new rate would become effective from Tuesday.

Last November, the strategic interest rate - the amount the federal Reserve charges banks borrowing funds from it - was atill at 14 percent. Friday's move means that the Federal Reserve wants to give a impetus to the drop in interest rates that occurred this week. Financial analysts commented that the Fed's rate cut confirms that the central bank does not intend to adhere strictly to its policy of limiting the growth of the money supply.

The discount rate reduction comes two days after a drop in the prime rate announced by the main U.S. hanks, from 13.5 to 13 percent. Believing that the monetary policy adopted by the Fed's open market committee at the start of the week would not lead to monetary tightness, the banks on Wednesday followed the example set 10 days ago by the LONG BEACH, California Oct. 9 (AP) - With a giant cargo ship loaded with Japanese imports looming behind him, President Ronald Reagan pledged Friday to work to find jobs for all of the 10.1 percent of the American labor force who were unemployed last month.

Reagan spoke before signing the Export Trading Company act, legislation he said would create hundreds of thousands of johs at no cost to the taxpayers. The bill was introduced by a Democratic Congressman, John J. Lafake of New York, in 1980.

Immediately after Friday's announcement of the lower discount rate, one bank, the Mellon Bank of Pittsburgh, announced a cut in its prime rate to 12.75 percent.

In commenting on the apparent lack of monetary tightness, analysts said that a restriction of credit at a time when the unemployment rate has just gone over 10 percent would have disastrous effects on chances for economic recovery. Last Tuesday, according 10 a report on the meeting issued Friday, the open market committee decided that a growth of the money supply greater than the target range (2.5 to 5.5 percent a year) was acceptable regular and restricted growth of money supply has been a key point in the Reagan administration's economic policy, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said Fridays that he had no objections to the Fed's recent flexibility. He commented that if the monetary authorities exceed their target range for a short time, that might be useful in

The Federal Reserve announced Friday afternoon that the basic U.S. M-1 money supply had fallen by $2.7 hillion during the last week in September. M-1, basically consisting of bills and coins in circulation and demand deposits, dipped from $461.2 billion to $458.2 billion during that week. The Fed also revised its money supply figures for the previous week downward by $500 million.

The majority of financial analysts now believe that the central bank no longer decides on its policy in accordance with short-run variations in the money supply. The drop of the discount rate Friday to 9.5 percent shows that the U.S. monetary authorities are focusing more attention on changes in interest rates, the analysts say.

A president of one New York bank said Friday that the discount rate reduction "is a signal indicating that the Fed bopes to be able to extend the movement of lower interest rates even further."

Capital flows into France

PARIS Oct. 9 (AFP) - Foreign investors are continuing to put their money into the French economy and create jobs despite the arrival of the left in power nearly 18 months

Foreign involvement in French industry is relatively large at nearly 24 percent, and the government is planning to increase this.

The swing to the left does not appear to have worried foreign investors unduly. Before the change of government, foreign investment was running at the rate of about 16,000 million francs (about $2.3 hillion) a year, and this figure has not fallen markedly since the changeover, at least so far as industrial investment is concerned.

Most foreign investment is in the form either of industrial or property investment, but foreign interest in the property sector has declined overall. Between 1971 and 1979 investment rose from 3,800 million francs - including 700 million in property to 10,300 million - of which 3,400 million was in property. This

Foreign investment continues to create as many industrial jobs. The Datar official monitoring body which records the creation of jobs, calculated that foriegn capital created 11,000 industrial employment opportunities in 1978, 11,700 in 1979, 12,000 in 1980, and 12,000 in 1981, estimating that this figure will be reached again in 1982 1983.

The same applies to the stock market, Experts say that foreign purchases of French stock have fallen markedly, although recent figures are not available.

UAE citizens the richest

MANAMA, Oct. 9 (AP) — The per capita share in the United Arah Emirates gross domestic product amounted to $25,837 in 1980, according to statistics released by UAE authorities.

The statistics, distributed here by the Bahrain-based Gulf news agency, put the average salary in the UAE at $7,160 per year tax-free "besides free health care, education and other services." This made the UAE citizens among the richest in the world.

GDP was put at $30.3 billion. The largest emirate. Abu Dhabi, accounted for more than 70 percent of this and the second largest, Dubai, for another 20 percent. The UAE is composed of seven emirates.

Exports, mostly crude oil, were put at $22.87 billion in 1980. The country netted a balance of trade surplus of $136 billion in the same vear.

The UAE, whose population is now estimated a slightly over one million, mostly expatriate workers, produced oil at an average rate of 1.5 million barrels per day in 1980. Its production is now down to one million barrels daily.

Dollar closes on weak note

JEDDAH, Oct. 9 - The dollar closed on a weaker tone on the New York Friday night exchanges after a larger than expected fall in the U.S. money supply figures and a ½ percent cut in the U.S. discount rate. The. weekly U.S. money supply series provided a pointer on how the dollar would fare when the MI series showed a $2.7 billion fall — a larger than expected total. U.S. dollar deposit rates came under pressure and the easing trend continued after the Federal Reserve Board cut its discount rate by 1/2 percent to 9 1/2 percent level. On the money markets, the one-year deposit closed at around 11 1/4 to 11 1/4 percent - down sharply from the 12-12 1/4 percent levels reached about 10 days ago. Shorter-dated funds also fell back to take the week-fixed to below the 10 percent level for the first time in 3 weeks to trade at 9 ¾ percent.

The news of a record rise in the U.S. unemployment level to 10.1 percent hardly affected the dollar, but the news cast a gloomy cloud over a possible quick turnaround from the present economic reces-

The bullion markets closed on a turbulent note with gold prices easing in some hectic trading. Gold closed at $41 g.20 an ounce in New York after topping the $430 level. Silver was steadier at first, but later on fell back in the face of profit-taking which saw prices close at $9.02, but still some 60 cents higher compared with the previous Friday'

On the local markets, traders reported that rival deposit levels cased by as much as 14 to 14 percent in some tenors. The weekfixed deposit fell to 10-10 1/4 percent from 10 3/4 percent and 11 percent Thursday. The one-month IIBOR was also lower at 10 % percent compared with 11-11 1/4 percent Thursday and dealers expect some further rate falls especially after the European ... markets reopen Monday. The local dealers beleive that the money markets will remain in a state of confusion until at least into the middle of next week since the American markets will be closed Tuesday for National Day holidays.

On the local exchanges, spot rival/dollar rates opened at 3.4400-05 levels, but soon eased back to below the 3,4400 official Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency parity selling price to trade at 3.4392-9g levels.

In New York, Friday night saw the dollar fall hack against some currencies but still remain strong against others. The British pound and the German mark were in the first category trading at 1.7130 and 2.5110 levels respectively. The French franc was stable at 7.1080 levels, while the Swiss franc fell to 2.1500 from 2.1390 on Thursday. The Japanese yen continued to improve. taking the yen/dollar rate to 266.00 from 247.00 lows of last week and helped in part by Japanese government calls to increase Japan's overseas imports to deflect criticism of that country.

LONDON, (AFP) - Brazil will not need to seek a rescheduling of its huge debts, Brazil's Planning Minister Antonio Delfim Netto has said. The minister was in London to sign a loan of $100 million. Loans obtained since the beginning of the year totaled 13.4 million and Brazil required only another 3.4 to 3.6 million, he said.

Metals move in tandem as gold bounces

LONDON, Oct. 9 (AFP) - There was a generally firmer trend on the commodity markets here this week as a strong rally in gold and other precious metals followed an initial setback.

The early weakness of sterling to a near six-year low against the U.S. dollar, and the interest rate cuts in Britain (to a four-year low) and in the United States were additional sustaining influences.

Later, the strength of the London Stock Exchaoge and Wall Street provided extra encouragement for speculative elements. The continuing unrest in the Middle East was a less prominent background factor than usual. Trading in coffee and gold futures was interrupted for half an hour Wednesday by a bomb alert, but there was little effect on trading. Nickel remained weak, falling to a new three and a half year low.

and with Penang firmly anchored at the floor price of the international agreement (29.15) Malaysian dollars/kilo), some recovery resulted from suspected buying support from the buffer stock manager.

Heavy borrowing of metal for forward delivery was also thought to be connected with this influential source. The premium for prompt delivery disappeared, although stocks were again cut, this time by 235 tons

Lead: Firmer. Early dull trading reflected a 350-ton rise in stocks to 121,100 tons. A cut in U.S. producer prices and the continuing poor Western world consumption over the first seven months of the year - 2.7 percent down on 1981, according to the Zinc: Firmer. It was initially lower, as was lead, because of higher market stocks (up 1.500 tons to $1,300 tons - the highest since last November), a cut in U.S. domestic prices and poor Western world consumption, which fell more than seven percent over the January-July period. But the market rallied firmly as fresh reports circulated that European Economic Community producers were considering further cutbacks.

Silver: Very firm. Prices moved to their highest for a month following a series of sharp gains toward the end of the week. Stocks rose 230,000 ounces to 36.940.000 ouoces, close to last month's record level. This deprived the market of early interest. But silver quickly followed the sharp upturn of gold and New York.

Aluminium: Very steady. Early trading was made up of large two-way husiness. with prices gradually moving higher despite sterling's improvement against the U.S. dollar. Then came a culminating surge. Stocks were down by 1,325 tons to 217,850 tons.

Sutton, a 37-year-old, 11th-hour acquisition from the Houston Astros, finally ran out of steam after the homer, allowing runscoring doubles by Fred Lynn and Don Baylor in the inning and leaving to a standing ovation. Ladd finished up, retiring all four Angels he faced.

With two out in the seventh inning, Molitor provided what turned out to be the winning runs when he cracked a two-out, two-run homer off reliever Mike Witt. Molitor had hit an inside-the-park homer in the Brewers' 4-2 loss at Anaheim Wednesday.

Meanwhile, rain forced the postponement of the second game of the National League Championship series between the Atlanta Braves and the St. Louis Cardinals Friday night at St. Louis. The first game of the series wa rained out after 41/2 innings. St. Louis won the replayed opener 7-0.

Friday night's game never got started with threatening skies opening up 30 minutes before the scheduled start when the field was covered. The rainout came 22 minutes after the scheduled start.

Postponement of the opening game Wednesday already had pushed hack the playoff schedule one day. Now, a second rainout could affect the schedule for the World Series, which is scheduled to begin next Tuesday night in the National League city. With Friday night's rainout, a five-game

NL playoff now could not be decided before Tuesday, That would force the World Series start back to Wednesday and eliminate a scheduled travel day from the NL to American League city next Tuesday.

farewell to New Orleans Houston Bureau

HOUSTON, Oct. 9 - Although Archie Manning was traded by New Orleans to the Houston Oilers at the beginning of this stalled football season, fans in New Orleans continue to adore their former quarterback. Friday had been proclaimed "Archie Manning Day by the New Orleans City Council. Manning, who spent his first 11 years as a professional football player in New Orleans, had tears in his eyes Thursday during the actual ceremonies when he said goodbye to the city. Manning said he has recieved thousands of telegrams and letters from friends and supporters since his trade after the second game of the season. "It's hard to tell you what its meant," he says. "I had someone tell me it was the greatest outpouring of tribute they'd ever seen."

Meanwhile, it was learnt that with the pro footballers strike going strong, Houston Oil-ers' defensive end Elvin Bethea gathers the Oilers around him each day after their informal workouts to see if any players are having any particular hardship due to the strike.

Bethea, a member of the NFL Players' Association Executive Committee, told a Houston newspaper that be likes to keep the players informed on the progress in the negotiations and wants to know if anybody is experiencing any financial difficulties. "I listen to their ideas. Then I go bome and write the ideas down," Bethea said.

Bethea said of the 25 or so players who attend the daily workouts. "I want to try and keep the players' frame of mind up as much as best to answer them. Like Wednesday, a few of the players wanted to go over the owners' proposal ($1.6 hillion over five years). After I explained it and we talked about it they agreed that the offer isn't fair and doesn't hreak down like everybody thinks."

Commenting on rumors that NFL owners will open the doors to their practice facilities to see how many players would break the strike and come back, Bethea said "If the owners are entertaining any ideas about accepting players who don't want to strike and combining the m with scabs to resume the season, they will have to be sure an adequate number of players want to come back."

Otherwise, for example, an owner could open his doors and only five players might report. In that case, the owner would have to pay five salaries. He also would not be able to resume the season because five players wouldn't be enough to start a new team. I'm not worried about our team. I don't think there's anybody on this team who would go back if they opened the doors."

Negotiations are deadlocked over the lemand for a wage scale. The own say they won't accept a wage scale and Bethea says the players will not after their demands, but added that be believes the Management Council will get serious in negotiations by next week.

With the owners losing their network television revenue as well as ticket sales, this week, I think things will beat up next week,"

Levi storms back to top with late flurry of birdies

Levi fought his way through blustery, gusty West Texas winds to a one-under-par 71 that stretched his lead to two strokes Friday in the second round of the $ 350,000 Lajet Classic.

"I'm just happy to get done somewhere around par," said Levi, who had to birdle three of the last four holes to regain the top spot with a 36-bole total of 135, nine shots under par for two trips over the 7,077-yard (6.471-meter) Fairway Oaks Golf and Racquet Club course.

Bruce Devlin, the slender Australian veteran who scored the last of his eight American tour titles 10 long years ago, agreed. "The condition were really difficult, very tough,"

He scrambled in with a no-bogey round of 70, however, with one-putt pars on five of the last six holes, and took second at 137.

Gary Koch and South African Bobby Cole were next at 138, each with a round of 71 in the winds that gusted well over 30 miles an hour. Jim Thorpe and Steve Liebler followed at 139, five under par. Liebler shot 71, Thorpe 72.

Tom Watson, the U.S. and British-Open title-holder who often plays his best under adverse conditions, had a 69 despite a double bogey and improved to 142.

Masters champion Craig Stadler went to a 74 hut remained very much in contention for his fifth title of the year at 140. Tom Kite and PGA champion Ray Floyd, who may be making their last American start of the season, each finished at 146, two over par. Floyd had a 74, Kite 72.

HONG KONG, Oct. 9 (AFP) - Sweden's European champion Mikael Appelgren upset China's world No. 3 Xie Saike 21-19, 21-15, 22-20 in a thrilling semifinal in the $45,000 World Cup Table Tennis here Saturday.

The 21-year-old Appelgren will now play China's world champion Guo Yachua in the final later Saturday for the top prize of $15,000. Guo won his final berth in the afternoon beating Hungary's 1975 world champ ion Istvan Jonyer 21-18, 21-17, 18-21

It was almost a replay of the final of the inaogural World Cup here two years ago in which Goo eventually beat the Hungarian ace to clinch the title. The left-handed Appelgren played a more defensive game against an impatient Xie, who made too many unforced errors with his powerful smashe

In the third game, they were neck and neck until 20-20, and the Swedish champion clinched the last two points for a place in the final. In the matches deciding fifth to eight places, South Korea's Park Lee Hee beat Japan's 1979 world champion Seiji Ono 21-19, 21-17 and Hong Kong's Chiu Man-Kuen edged American champion Eric Bog-gan 21-18, 17-21, 21-12.

Jonyer, who had made the last four stage with a superlative display against Japanese Seiji Ono, found the 16-year-old Chinese ace, Guo Yuehna, a difficult opponent to pass. Both the players displayed excellent defense, but Guo's ability to kill loose returns proved decisive.

Guo also exploited the flanks with some superb rolling drives, but Jonyer countered all the Chinese tactics with a passive but. The players' tactical play produced a replete of rallies, enthralling the capacity MacPherson Stadium. Only in the third game did Jonyer come out attacking with pin point accuracy to take the third game. But: the Chinese nipped Jonyer's hopes in the fourth to ensure his berth in the final.

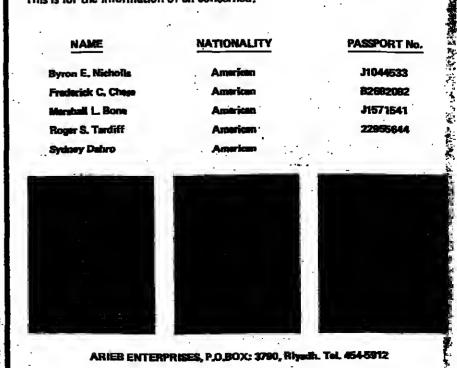

Appelgren's stout defense proved the deciding factor in his match against Saike. His defense had also stood in him good stead against local competitor Chiu Man-Kuev in the quarterfinals. Appelgren quelled Chiu's aspiration with a 21-19, 20-22, 21-19, 19-21, 21-11 victory in the last eight stage.

Chiu, a last-minute replacement for Nigeria's African and Commonwealth champion Sunday Eboh, produced flashes of brilliance against Appelgren. But his erratic attack let him down in the decides.

Pomp & pageantry marks end of Games

England's gold rush falls Walker's tactical blunder just one short of Australia

By John Crasto Special to Arab News

BRISBANE, Oct. 9 - So touching, so sweet this farewell. The Commonwealth Games elosing ceremony was an experience to remember. Royalty and uncrowned heroes of sport were the central figures, friendship and joy was the main theme.

It was all "Waltzing Matilda" and "Auld Lang's Syne" as tears and langhter mingled with song and dance. Gone were the tension and fatigue of arduous days of competition. Saturday was the day to celebrate, to let off steam. The Euphoria of affection and eloseness so underlined in these "Friendly Games" reigned.

No more the organized affair of the opening. Athletes joined hands and strolled happily through the parade. So much like those on the street, with hands, floats, dance groups, skydivers and a Chinese dragon were the performers of a touching scene which will certainly hring nostalgia to all who have been part and parcel of the Brisbane Games where honds of friendship were fostered and the memory of a friendly people never to be wiped out.

The aportsmen and women here will wait till that day when the next Commonwealth Games will surface at Scotland to meet and renew friends and friendship

But hefore Queen Elizabeth declared the end of this 10-day extravaganza of sport there were great achievements on the track and field nn a day when England's domination of road eyeling was underlined.

Australia's Raylene Boyle ran her last race Saturday. But she was bound to go out with a silver. Canada's Angella Taylor held out to win the 4 x 400 meters relay in a breathtaking finish which saw Australia and Raylene Boyle miss out by a whisker.

From dawn to dusk it was all excitement. Saturday, the cyclists were on the road for the

They were the best in the Commonwealth — Malcolm Elliott and Stephen Lawrence of England, Russel Harrington (Wales), Roger Sumich (New Zealand) and Stephen Bauer (Canada) all going through cat and mouse tactics for almost five miles hefore the finish.

So much was expected from John Walker. The New Zealander ran extremely well. But he made a tactical hlunder which cost him the 1500 meters. Walker was lying in fourth position on the backstretch of the final lap when the runners opened up in what was generally a slow race.

BERN, Switzerland, Oct. 9 (AP) - The Union of European Football Associations announced Friday night a sweeping range of sanctions against clubs in a record number of 51 disciplinary cases following the first round of the European Soccer Cup tournaments. Fines totaled more than 100,000 Swiss francs ($45,660).

The hardest-hit club was France's St.

The UEFA communique said fans threw several objects on the field with one rock hitting the Hungarian goalkeeper and forcing an interruption of the game.

The Danish Soccer Federation drew a 5,000-franc ($2,280) fine because fans threw two smoke bombs into the English goal zone during the Sept. 22 qualifying match for the European Championships at Copenhagen, in which Denmark held England to a 2-2 draw. The communique made no mention of the post-game rampage in which 43 English supporters were detained by police.

States will begin deploying Tomahawk sealaunched cruise missiles with conventional warheads in East Asia this year and nucleartipped Tomahawks in 1984, the Asahi Shim bun reported Saturday, quoting U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. The newspaper said the move was to Weinberger expressed concern that if the Western countries failed to take measures to counter the buildup of Soviet military potential, Moscow wuuld have a greater temptation to use force.

America to test satellite killer

NEW DELHI, Oct. 9 (AFP) - The United States will test a device to destroy satellites in space next year, aerospace specialist Marcia Smith of the science policy research division of the U.S. Congressional Research Service said here Saturday.

The device, the size of a heavy iin can, will he carried atop a two-stage rocket which is to he launched from an aircraft and home in on the satellite, she told newsmen. She added that the system, that had been under development fur sometime was different from that of the Soviet Union in that no explosives will he used.

Miss Smith, who is on a lecture tour of India, said the Soviets use interceptor satellites carrying chemical explosives which explode in the vicinity of target satellites. She said the Soviet Union had carried out 20 tests since 1968 of its anti-satellite weapons system with a reported success rate of 75 percent. The Soviet Union had taken a lead in the exploitation of outer space by being the first country to place a space station in space in 1971, she said.

On space research, Miss Smith said the Soviets had more information about growing plants in space, studying the growth of organisms, water regeneration and processing of materials in space, she added. She said that the Soviet space station Salyut carries a very high resolution camera (MKF-6) that can take pictures of objects on earth separated by just 20 meters.

She added that in 1984 France was going to launch a satellite called "Spot" with a still better resolution of 10 meters. The scanners on the U.S. Landsat satellites have a resolution of 50 meters.

Zuazo warns outgoing army rulers

LA PAZ. Bolivia, Oct. 9 (AP) — President-elect Hernan Siles Zuazo, returning Friday from more than two years in exile in Peru, promised in a speech hroadcast nationwide to "construct a viable democracy" and warned outgoing military rulers he would brook no interference.

Siles Zuazo is to assume Bolivia's presidency Sunday after more than two years of military rule in this Andean nation of 5.5 million people. He was elected in absentia last Tuesday by the recently convened Cungress and will become only the third civilian leader of this nation since 1964.

In his speech a La Paz' C'entral San Francisco Square, Siles Zuazo wnrned Bolivia's outgoing military rulers that he will "accept no conditions" during his four-year term of office, "We will accept no conditions or impositions from military chiefs who have dirtied the honor of their institutions," the soon-to-be commander in chief told a crowd estimated at 50,000.

When Siles Zuazo is swurn into office Sunday the country's military commanders will return to barracks for the first time since they seized power here in July, 1980's bloody takeover. At that time Gen. Luis Garcia Meza, then-army commander, toppled the interim civilian government of Mrs. Lydia Gueiler Tejada, his distant cousin.

Poles feel shoes' pinch

WARSAW, Oct. 9 (AP) - Poland has added shoes to the list of goods that are rationed.

Two years ago, hefore the labor upbeaval that ended in martial law last Dec. 13. Poland was laden with Western financial credits and could boast that it was a "major" exporter of shoes to the West and Middle East. In 1980. exports reached 25 million pairs, dipping to 18.8 million in 1981.

Now, shoe production has dropped drastically, and the Polish news agency said that a large portion of shoes made for adults are still being exported.

From a total production of 72.8 million shoes in 1979, the last year before 1980 strikes ushered in both the independent union Solidarity and a new party leadership. shoe production is expected to sink to 35 million pairs this year.

Newspapers reporting the drop in shoe production blamed it on lack of glue and tan ning chemical for leather, much of which must be imported from the West or manufactured from Western material. "Yes, I read that we will produce about 35 million pairs of sboes this year." said Czeslawa. manager of a shoe shop on Warsaw's Marszalkowska street, the city's main shopping area. "But where are they?"

The Polish news agency PAP recently said the Chelmek sboe factory, one of Poland's largest, would produce 4.4 million pairs of sboes for men and women this year at its main factory and 2.8 million pairs of children's shoes in a hranch at Bedzin.

"While all the children's sboes will go to the Polish market," PAP said, "80 percent of the shoes for adults will he exported mainly to the United States. Canada and European countries."

With shortages of materials, hig shoe fac-tories such as "Radoskor" in Radom and "Syrena" in Warsaw are having trouble meeting old production levels. Figures on the shoes these two factories produce ur export are not available.

As a result of the shortage. Poles will receive coupons entitling them to purchase one pair of footwear "suitable for winter and autumn," and one pair of other sboes "depending on the footwear market," according to official reports.

But the market situation looks grim. In Warsaw, for example, state-run stores will have from 280,000 to 300,000 pairs of shoes to sell in October - in an area with 2.4 million inbabitants.

"Of course, it doesn't mean Poles will be going barefoot," one Polish office worker commented. "Radoning of food doesn't mean you starve." As usual. Poles will resort to getting their old sboes fixed - although some sboemakers refuse work saying they are already swamped — or go to private markets or buy shoes from friends.

KATMANDU, Oct. 9 (AFP) - The Nepalese government bas started dropping supplies of food grains to eleven remote hilly regions in the far north, where starvation is threatening, officials announced Saturday.

The Nepalese government has also started collecting 104,365 metric tons of food grains for distribution to areas where food is short.

Extortion plot in Tylenol case called a hoax

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9 (AFP) - Police investigating the random poisoning of Tylenol painkilling capsules were Saturday convinced that a hlackmail letter seeking a million dollars from the manufacturers was a hoax. Seven persons in the Chicago area are known for certain to have died after taking Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules laced with Press reports Friday said the multinadonal firm Johnson and Johnson, parent company of the Tylenol manufacturers, had received a letter warning the poisoning would continue until the money was paid. But police were now discounting this new lead after discovering that the money was to be paid into a named hank account which was closed a long time ago. They said it was unlikely that poisoner, who has taken so much care up to now, would make such a blatant mistake.

Police said Friday that they were satisfied that a student who died in Philadelphia last April had in fact committed suicide, and had himself left traces of cyanide of a Tylonol hottle found near his body. However, a dental student detained in connection with this death and who reportedly had relatives and friends in Chicago, was still being questioned.

Police said more enquiries were necessary in order to rule him out completely. In Chicago, where over a hundred police are on the case, all lines of investigation so far have come to nothing. Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner said there was no prosepect of an early arrest but leads were bing narrowed down.

Meanwhile, the Tylenol manufacturers, McNeill, are destroying some 22 million bottles of Extra-Strength capsules (the regular strength was not affected) at an estimated cost of $79 million.

Book questions U.K.'s motives in Falklands their colonial relationship.

LONDON, Oct. 9 (ONS) - A critical look at Britain's motives for going to war over the Falkland Islands, as well as at the modves of the Argentine junta, is contained in a book just published in London by an independent research body. the Latin America Bureau.

Produced with the aid of church organizaoons, both Catholic and Protestant, Falk lands Malvinas: Whose Crisis? questions the Thatcher Government's rhetoric about "not appeasing dictators" and appends an analysis of the jingoistic treatment of the war by sections of the British press.

After noting Britain's leading role in Argentina's commercial development up to World War II, the authors refer to the readiness of the international financial community (and, up to the moment of the Argentine seizure of the islands, of the British Govemment) to support the military dictator-

Britain's record of support for human rights and democratic government in Latin America generally is poor, they say. They cite the reluctance even of the former Labor Government to give asylum to refugees from oppression in Chile, Argentina and Brazil, and successive British governments' readiness to sell arms to these countries. "Together with West Germany, the United States, Israel and France, Britain has not hesitated to supply sophisticated weapons systems and support for Argentina's growing domestic arms industry."

Among the arms supplied bave heen Type 42 destroyers, Lynx naval helicopters, military electronics and communications systems, Canberra bombers and small arms - making the United Kingdom Argendna's fourth largest arms supplier. A Rolls-Royce representative is quoted as saying, nine days after Argentine forces had seized the Falklands: " As far as we are concerned, they are still our customers." The book is even more scathing and controversial about Britain's claim to sovereignty over the islands. It quotes a senior British Foreign Office official as saying, in 1936, that Britain's seizure of the Falklands in 1833 was "an arbitrary procedure" hy modern standards. "It was essential therefore that a settler population he supported for Britain to continue to exert its claim. However...Britisb governments showed little interest in improving the islanders' political rights or improving their standards."

On self-determination, a principle much emphasized by Britain during the Falklands crisis, the authors point out that whereas most of Britain's former colonies campaigned vigorously for their independence, the Falkland Islanders bave sought to retain

"The absence of a democratic process on the islands, determined largely by the level of paternalism and (Falklands Islands Company) monopoly, holdsout little promise for the development of selfdetermination."

Had the crisis been resolved through a transfer of sovereignty, the book argues, the islanders would bave had to halance their desire to remain British with a desire to remain on the islands. Possibilities might then have been discussed for schemes such as limited autonomy on the islands, dual nationality for their inhabitants and other forms of protection of minority rights.

"However, the war has polarized positions on both sides, leaving little room for any peaceful resolution of the conflict." The same pessimism pervades the authors' view of Britain's options for the immediate future. Three are officially under discussion, it notes:

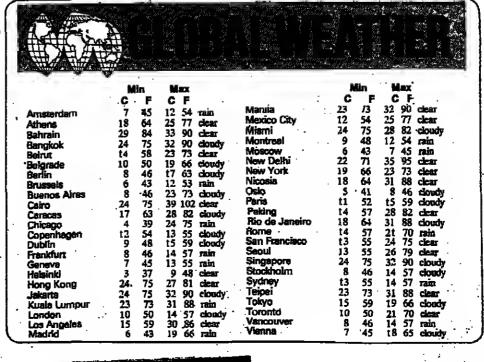

Independence, giving executive and legislative powers to the islanders with Britain guaranteeing the islands' integrity (Cyprus-style arrangement).

Associated statehood, whereby the queen remains head of state, but all matters of government except foreign policy and defense would be decided by the islanders,

Bavaria poll result may affect Kohl coalition

MUNICH, West Germany, Oct. 9 (R) -Bavarians vote Sunday in a state election that could affect the stability of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's new center-right West German government. Bavaria, with eight million voters, bas long been the fief of right-wing Christian Social Union (CSU) leader Franz Josef

He seems sure of re-election as state premier with an absolute majority. In the last vote in 1978, the CSU polled 59.1 percent. This is the last state ballot before the general election which Kohl has promised for next March, and it is seen as a key test of public opinion about the government change which has just taken place in Bonn.

- Social Democratic (SPD) officials are confident their party will receive a big vote of sympathy for former Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, ousted by parliament last week in an unprecedented no-confidence vote. And they hope Bavarian voters will punish the libral Free Democrats (FDP), who left Schmidt to side with Kohl, by excluding them from the state assembly.

In the 1978 vote, the FDP won 6.2 percent. It would take only a small swing to push the liberal party under the five percent minimum required for seats in the legislature. Just two weeks ago. the FDP suffered the worst result in its history in the Hesse state election, losing half its voters and polling a mere 3.1 percent. There has been little sign that it will fare much better in Bavaria.
